Motorized U. S. Troops Battle Axis in Tunisia

American Units Reinforce British First Army in Africa

Small French Military Units Fighting with the Allies

LONDON, Nov. 16 (AP)—Motorized United States troops were disclosed officially tonight to have reinforced the British First Army pouring into Tunisia and, evidently, already were fighting against German and Italian troops in the first stages of the decisive battle for North Africa.

An Allied headquarters communiqué disclosed the reinforcement, involving American armored troops.

It said also that in both the east and center of the North African front, small French military units had begun to co-operate with the Allied task forces.

The communiqué mentioned specifically a French force which had joined United States troops at their stations in Oran. Unofficial reports said anti-Axis French soldiers in Tunisia had clashed with the Germans on Sunday.

Explosive Axis Claims

Giving the lie to extravagant Axis claims of heavy damage to the Allied battle, supply and transport fleets in the continuing operation, the communiqué said confidently: "The Royal Navy maintains control of the Western Mediterranean and its approaches."

"This naval force has sustained losses, but these have been small in proportion to the size of the operations, and casualties on the whole have been light."

It also was announced that the officer and crew of a U-boat which had been sunk off the North African coast had been taken prisoner.

Axis reports indicated sharp fighting already had started inside Tunisia.

Axis Forces Land

The German and Italian high commands, in simultaneous communiqués, announced that Axis forces had "landed in Tunisia with the approval of French civilian and military authorities."

There were Morocco radio reports of fighting between German and Allied troops at Bizerte, the important Tunisian port, but Allied headquarters said these were premature.

It was evident that the Allied force was proceeding inside Tunisia with adroit regard for the problems of supply and tactics.

This may have been in the vicinity of Bizerte, Tunisian port, where fighting previously had been reported by the Morocco radio station.

Radio Algiers, in the first specific report of action between anti-Axis Frenchmen and German troops, said a column of Nazi motorcyclists and armored vehicles had been flung into retreat on the road from Tunis to Djedida Sunday.

Repairmen Trainers Offered Good Jobs

BALTIMORE, Nov. 16 (AP)—The United States Civil Service Commission announced today that there are a number of openings available for armament repairmen trainers.

Men who have had one year of experience as a journeyman mechanic or three years of experience as an automobile mechanic or two years of experience as a machinist are eligible.

The training will fit them for skilled positions with the ordnance branch of the war department.

Japanese Completely Frustrated, Admiral Nimitz Says of Battle

PEARL HARBOR, Nov. 16 (AP)—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz in a communiqué today said the strongest Japanese attempt to date to recapture Guadalcanal "has been completely frustrated by the aggressive action of Vice Admiral Halsey and his forces."

The communiqué follows:

Willkie Objects To Churchill's Plan for Future

Criticizes British Prime Minister for Recent Speech

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 (AP)—Wendell Willkie sharply criticized tonight Prime Minister Winston Churchill's recent "we mean to hold our own" declaration regarding the British Empire and asserted it had shocked the world.

Urging the United Nations to develop now a plan to make the materials of economic self-development available to all the world after the war, Willkie declared in a speech prepared for the New York Herald Tribune forum:

"This cannot be accomplished by mere declarations of our leaders, as in an Atlantic charter, particularly when one of the two principals to that instrument has in the last few days seemingly defended the old Imperialistic order and declared to a shocked world: 'we mean to hold our own.'"

Churchill's Statement

(On Nov. 10, Churchill said in an address to the lord mayor's dinner: "Let me, however, make this clear, in case there should be any mistake about it in any quarter: We mean to hold our own. I have not become the king's first minister in order to preside over the liquidation of the British Empire.")

Willkie said that unless the people of the United States, Great Britain, Russia, China and all the other United Nations agreed today on their purposes, the idealistic expressions of hope as embodied in the Atlantic charter "will live merely to mock us" as did President Woodrow Wilson's fourteen points in the first World War.

"The four freedoms will not be accomplished by the declarations of those momentarily in power," said the 1940 Republican presidential nominee. "They will become real only if the people of the world force them into actuality. And political internationalism will not accomplish them. Real freedom must rest on economical internationalism."

Willkie said that those who sneer when it is suggested that freedom and self-government could be brought to all men, feel that areas such as the Malay Peninsula or islands of the Southeast Pacific

Callaghan Dies Fighting Japs In Naval Battle

Rear Admiral Killed on Board Cruiser He Commanded

But His Ship Takes Heavy Toll of Japanese Warships

By WALTER B. CLAUSEN

PEARL HARBOR, T. H., Nov. 16 (AP)—Vice Admiral W. F. Halsey, commander of the South Pacific area, reported tonight that Rear Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan, former naval aide to President Roosevelt, was killed in action aboard the cruiser he commanded during a successful night engagement against superior Japanese forces off Savo Island on Nov. 13.

Admiral Callaghan was commander of a task force which attacked a group of Jap battleships, cruisers and destroyers screening a large body of transports attempting to land troops on Guadalcanal.

Shells Enemy Cruiser

Callaghan's flagship first shelled an enemy cruiser, which blew up, and then closed at 2,000 yards with a battleship on which she scored eighteen hits with her main battery. She also sank a destroyer with a secondary battery before the remnants of the enemy force could effect a retirement.

Other ships of the American forces were similarly successful against the enemy, Admiral Halsey reported.

Killed On Bridge

During night action Admiral Callaghan's flagship received several fourteen-inch shell hits from an enemy battleship. These wrecked the bridge and other parts of the superstructure. It was in this phase that Callaghan was killed.

On a previous afternoon when Admiral Callaghan's task force was escorting a transport convoy near Tulagi, the force was attacked by twenty-one torpedo bombers. American ships and supporting fighting planes shot down twenty of these, one of which crashed in flames into the after structure of the battleship.

Admiral Halsey Gets Credit for Smashing Victory

Navy Commander Who Does Unorthodox Things Defeats Japs

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP)—A highly unorthodox admiral, who figuratively tosses the rule book out a porthole when he goes to sea, directed the smashing victory over the Japanese navy in the Solomons.

He is Vice Admiral William F. (Pudge) Halsey, who was placed in charge of the Solomons operations last month when things looked so dark there that the assignment was regarded as one of the toughest in history.

But Halsey, who won fame for his hammer-like sea and air raids on Japanese-held Wake, Marcus and Marshall and Gilbert islands earlier in the war, has completely changed the picture so that it is the Nipponese who are looking on the dark side now.

All Rules Broken

All the details of the great struggle have not arrived yet, but it is safe to assume that many of the traditional rules of warfare were broken. For Halsey, in explaining his earlier successes as commander of raiding task forces, once said:

"We get away with it because we violate all the traditional rules of naval warfare. We do the exact opposite of what they expect us to do. We deliberately put ourselves under fire of enemy batteries. We expose ourselves to shore-based planes. We do not stay behind the battle with our carriers. Most important: whatever we do, we do fast."

The great part that aviation played in the Solomons island victory is apparent from the communiqué—and that might be expected of

Russians Report Repulse of Many German Attacks

Kill 2,000 Nazis near Leningrad and 1,500 at Stalingrad

Also Report Slight Russian Gain in Vicinity of Nalchik

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

MOSCOW, Tuesday, Nov. 17 (AP)—The Russians announced today that approximately 2,000 Germans had been killed in the Red army's capture and continued control of an important village in the Leningrad siege area, and said that 1,500 more were killed in repulsed attacks at Stalingrad, where the Soviets themselves gained slightly.

The midnight communiqué told of another slight Russian gain in the mid-Caucasian area southeast of Nalchik, and described a firm Red army defense of its lines north-east of Tsupse along the Black Sea coast.

Seize Important Village

The Soviets announced that the Red army had seized a village "of great tactical importance" on the Volkhov front near Leningrad in a surprise attack that weakened Nazi encirclement attempts around Russia's second largest city. A German battalion (500 men) was wiped out.

Then the midnight communiqué said that another 1,500 Nazis had been killed trying to retake the village. The fighting has been going on there for two days.

On the nearly-stalemated Stalingrad front the Russians said the Germans lost 1,000 men, two tanks, six guns, seventeen trench mortars, eleven machineguns and other booty yesterday in attacks which "gained no success whatsoever."

In one sector of the city the communiqué said the Red army springing to the counterattack "disclosed the enemy from a line he had occupied two days ago."

19 Nazi Planes Bagged

Other results announced at midnight were the downing of nineteen Nazi planes in fighting on all fronts, the killing of several hundred more Germans at scattered points along the vast front, and the sinking of an 8,000-ton German transport-tanker in the Barots Sea.

The situation as it has been summed up before issuance of the midnight bulletin was:

Soviet troops advanced slightly southeast of Nalchik killing 200 Germans on the northern side of the towering central Caucasus mountains. Northeast of Gausep near the Black Sea, they ambushed a German column behind the lines destroying 15 trucks and 40 Nazis.

In Stalingrad attacks by small enemy groups were reported thrown back and further gains registered northwest of the bitterly-cold Volga city.

Germany's Version

"The Germans said the Russian attack on the Volkhov front collapsed; that further blocks of houses were seized in Stalingrad; and that two encircled Soviet groups were annihilated in the Caucasus where counter-attacks were beaten off."

Four weeks, the Germans have been reporting Russian troop movements and concentrations in the vast snow-covered section between Moscow and Leningrad.

It was possible that the Volkhov action there might be a prelude to a new Russian winter offensive, now that the enemy has been weakened by enormous casualties and the exigencies of the North African campaign.

GEN. MacARTHUR TAKES FIELD AGAINST JAPS IN NEW GUINEA

GEN. MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, AUSTRALIA, Tuesday, Nov. 17 (AP)—General Douglas MacArthur has taken the field himself to direct the Allied campaign to drive the Japanese from their invasion base at Buna, New Guinea, the high command announced today.

Allied forces are closing in rapidly on Buna, both from the west and from the south, and the enemy is steadily retreating, the communiqué said.

Allied fighter planes and bombers are pounding incessantly at the fleeing Japanese. Heavy bombers also smashed at enemy shipping in the Buna-Faisi area in the northern end of the Solomon archipelago, damaging a destroyer and a transport.

"The commander-in-chief of the southwest Pacific, General Douglas MacArthur, with the advanced echelon his headquarters, and the commanders of Allied land forces and air forces, Generals Sir George Thomas Blamey and Lieut. General C. Kenney, are personally conducting the campaign in Papua," a spokesman said.

American Fighter Planes Raid Nazi Units in France

At Same Time RAF Deals Hard Blow to Axis at Genoa

Hundreds of Explosions and Fires in Large Italian City

By LEO BRANHAM

LONDON, Nov. 16 (AP)—American fighter planes shot up troop-laden German trucks, military posts and gun emplacements in low level strafing assaults in France today after the RAF struck a destructive blow overnight at Genoa, Italian supply port for battered Axis forces in North Africa.

Hundreds of bombs, from 1,000-pounders up to the two-ton block busters, fell on Genoa for twenty-five minutes, the air ministry said, starting hundreds of explosions and fires which roared through warehouses bulging with Axis supplies and sending clouds of smoke rolling out over the Gulf of Genoa.

One pilot of a four-motored Halifax said he saw a "fire start at one end of a lane of warehouses on a strip of land jutting into the inner harbor and spread along the whole line."

Pacific Victory Follows Reports Of Major Defeat

Italians and Japanese Make Extravagant and Silly Claims

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 (AP)—The United States Navy's announcement of the spectacular victory over a Japanese fleet in the Solomon Islands region came at the end of a day of equally spectacular boasting by Japanese and Italian propagandists.

Japanese spokesmen repeatedly annihilated the American navy, torpedoing it with short waves, and the Rome radio was at the point of capturing all the Solomon Islands for the Japanese.

The Federal Communications Commission reported that early this afternoon the Rome radio said in a Hungarian language broadcast: "The United States is preparing the public for the loss of the Solomons."

Tokyo, speaking English this morning to the Philippines, Thailand and Burma, said:

"The battle of the Solomons is proving fatal to the American navy."

The Japanese news agency Domei, in a Morse code transmission to the United States, observed:

"The Japanese have the Americans where they want them, and mean to keep them there until no American warship is left in active service."

Tokyo, speaking in English to Australia:

Gigantic Enemy Armada Fails To Land on Island

Only a Few Japanese Believed To Have Reached Guadalcanal

Rear Admiral Callaghan Killed in Action at Close Range

By WILLIAM F. FRYE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP)—In the greatest naval battle since Jutland, United States forces have sunk twenty-three Japanese ships and thus smashed a tremendous enemy armada which sought to drive the Americans on Guadalcanal into the sea, the navy disclosed late today.

Backed by MacArthur's bombers, surface and air units of the Navy destroyed eleven Japanese warships and twelve transports and damaged seven other vessels in a three-day running battle, much of it a vicious, close-range gun duel in the darkness.

American Losses Small

The only American vessels so far reported sunk in the engagement were two light cruisers and six destroyers, and naval men here said they did not believe American personnel losses were extremely large.

But probably about 24,000 Japanese soldiers died when eight transports, part of a large force headed for Guadalcanal, were sent to the bottom by air attack the morning of November 14. Four others kept moving toward Guadalcanal, and may have succeeded in getting men ashore, since the Americans discovered four cargo transports beached at Tasafaronga, the next day, and proceeded to smash them with a concentration of air, artillery and naval gun attack.

Clinch American Dominance

However, only a fraction of the huge force dispatched by the Imperial Japanese command ever reached the southeastern Solomons, and it seemed a safe assumption that this battle had clinched the American dominance of that area.

Presumably, the enemy could gather another great force and try again, but with such staggering losses to count it was thought unlikely here that the Japs would care to risk what strength they have left in a new attempt to retake the strategic Guadalcanal area.

The battle of Jutland, an engagement in 1916 between the British grand fleet and the German high seas fleet, assured Allied supremacy.

General Patton Escapes Death When Shell Hits Landing Boal

By J. WES GALLAGHER

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Nov. 16 (AP)—Major Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., commander of the American task force which occupied Morocco, literally stepped into a fierce naval battle at the start of the operation eight days ago it was disclosed tonight in a special communiqué issued by Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Commanding both Gen. Patton and Rear Admiral H. K. Hewitt for their combined assault on a 200-mile front of Atlantic coast, Gen. Eisenhower reported that a small landing boat which General Patton was about to enter from his ship was demolished by a French gun.

"For the next couple of hours General Patton became an unwilling spectator of a naval battle," a communiqué said, "with his transfer to shore necessarily postponed until the warship he was on could settle affairs with its opponents."

German Claims Denied

German claims of sinking eighty-nine Allied ships around the port of Africa, meanwhile was authoritatively refuted here as "vastly exaggerated."

Germany Likely To Make Stand, Simpson Asserts

Believes Hitler Will Risk Battle in North Africa

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer
The peril of the Axis army in Africa is real and imminent. The consequences for Hitler if it is quickly and completely liquidated are too grave to assume that he is resigned to the defensive for the war's duration. Some bold if risky Nazi attempt at a military action must be in the making.

The authors of the North African nut-cracker attack, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill, make it clear they expect vigorous enemy reaction. They do not believe Hitlerism is yet cracking up or lacks the power to strike back. The Axis still enjoys inestimable advantages. It has a single command and a seasoned staff to execute, as it has before, miracles of military logistics. It has inside communication lines, vulnerable only to long distance Allied air attack.

Chances Favor Allies

There is some indication that in Nazi war books the Axis-Ally battle now joined in Tunisia is primarily a sacrifice affair, a delaying operation. Whether to permit Rommel to find a short line for a stand or to salvage his shattered corps by sea evacuation, it seems vital that the western jaw of the Allied nut-cracker be slowed up.

The chances are all against prolonged successful resistance by the Axis in Tunisia. Whatever their number, Axis troops there must lack the heavy fighting equipment of their Anglo-American assailants.

Hundreds of miles still gape between the British pursuit of Rommel from the east now rounding off by-passing the Libyan hump, and Eisenhower's advance guard in Tunisia. That they ultimately will meet seems foreordained unless Hitler moves more drastically than he yet has to avert it. And his chance of ferrying a huge army to Africa does not seem good.

May Invade Turkey

The Hitler alternative would be a diversion attack somewhere else to halt or draw off either or both of the Allied nut-cracker forces. Conjecture dismisses the Russian front or a stepped-up air attack on England as apt to have that effect. That seems to leave only Turkey and Spain as possible Axis diversion theaters.

Both would involve heavy risks. Even if Turkey did not fight back—and there is now every reasonable assurance that she would—a vast extension of front and communication lines would confront the Germans and their Allies. Axis forces in Russia and the west would have to be further and dangerously thinned. There is no assurance an attack on Turkey could halt the Allied African nut-cracker short of clearing North Africa of the foe.

Spain would be easier but less threatening to the Allies, although air and submarine bases on the Spanish Atlantic coast could be a grave new threat to Anglo-American sea communications.

The only certain thing is that Hitler must move somewhere and soon or sit down to stand siege on the continent and admit he has shot his offensive bolt.

Guffey Moves For New Coal Commission

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP)—Senator Guffey (D-Pa.) who introduced the original bituminous coal act, moved today to reestablish a bituminous coal commission to replace the coal division of the Department of the Interior.

Guffey introduced legislation calling for the establishment of a three-man commission. The original coal commission was composed of seven members and was displaced after wrangling among its members raised administration of the coal act to be placed under the Interior department.

Purpose of the commission, according to the bill, would be to "initiate, promote and conduct research designed to improve standard methods used in the mining, preparation, conservation, distribution and utilization of coal and the discovery of additional uses for coal."

Nine Injured When Bus Hits Truck

LINTHICUM, Md., Nov. 16 (AP)—Nine passengers and the driver of a bus bound from Fort George G. Meade to Baltimore were injured today in a collision of the bus and a trailer truck loaded with 2,000 gallons of tar.

The driver, Floyd J. Marcin, 21, Baltimore, and one passenger, Mrs. Mary Abbott, 27, were seriously hurt. The other eight, including a mother and her three-year-old daughter, were treated for cuts and bruises.

Fifteen soldiers from Fort Meade were on the Baltimore and Annapolis railroad bus, but were not hurt. Marcin was pinned in the wreckage for ten minutes. The driver of the truck and his helper escaped unhurt.

Important Dog Frisks in Court

Two Claim Terrier and Present Pedigrees to Judge

CHICAGO, Nov. 16 (AP)—A wire-haired terrier frisked about the Shakespeare avenue court today while rival claimants argued over his custody.

Mrs. Marie Burns and Charles Vanderheyden both contended that they owned him.

"He's Snoqualmie of Berteau," stated Mrs. Burns, petting the dog with one hand and flourishing pedigree papers with the other. "But I just call him Muggins."

"He's Count Michael of Witten," retorted Vanderheyden as he produced similar articles of ancestry. "But he's used to being called Mick. I know it's Mick," he added, "because of the cyst I found on his leg."

"But I had Muggins vaccinated," protested Mrs. Burns. "It left a scar."

A decision was difficult enough under these circumstances, but the dog made matters worse by lavishing affection on everybody concerned.

Judge Michael Tremko finally awarded the dog to Mrs. Burns, ruling that the evidence showed he was in her possession before the Vanderheyden's pet disappeared last February.

Eight-year-old Barbara Vanderheyden took the order tearfully, but the terrier showed only the nonchalance you would expect of Snoqualmie of Berteau—or of Count Michael of Witten.

Morgenthau Not Worried Over Loss of $18,000 In American Gold

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP)—Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark doesn't have to worry about that $18,000 in government gold he lost in the sea during a daring under-cover trip into North Africa prior to the A. E. F. invasion.

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau told his press conference today that as far as he was concerned, "it wouldn't matter if he had lost $18,000,000—I'd still like to give him a treasury award for a job well done, if we had such an award."

Revealing how the money was lost in the waters of North Africa, Clark said jokingly last week that he hoped Morgenthau wouldn't try to jail him for it.

Fighting French Angry at Darlan For War Efforts

Call Admiral "No. 2 Traitor of France" in Statement

By EDWIN SHANKE

LONDON, Nov. 16 (AP)—The Allied campaign in North Africa became fraught with political complexities tonight when the fighting French balked at negotiations with Admiral Jean Darlan, whom one of their spokesmen called the "No. 2 traitor of France."

Darlan, former Vichy defense chief, apparently is the ranking French leader cooperating with the Allies in North Africa.

A statement issued by Gen. Charles De Gaulle's headquarters said the fighting French were taking no part whatsoever in, and assuming no responsibility for negotiations in progress in North Africa with representatives of Vichy.

"Should the negotiations result in arrangements which would in effect confirm the Vichy regime in North Africa, such decisions could obviously not be accepted by fighting France."

Bitter Toward Darlan
A spokesman went on to explain that the fighting French were not trying to "throw a monkey wrench into the negotiations or to spoil any subtle plan the Americans may have," but said, "the plain fact is the Allies are treating on the basis of equality with the No. 2 traitor of France."

The fighting French job, he said, was to make clear to Frenchmen "thrown into bewilderment and consternation by the confused political developments" that Gen. De Gaulle was not mixed up in them.

Indicating that still more complications were in the offing, Reuters reported in a dispatch dated "from the French frontier," that Pierre Etienne Flandin, a former premier of the republic and a pre-war advocate of collaboration with Germany who later became Marshal Petain's foreign minister, had also arrived in Allied-occupied North Africa.

Reuters, attributing its information to usually well-informed sources, said Flandin had been joined by Pierre Pucheu, a former Vichy minister of the interior.

The fighting French statement, issued after Gen. De Gaulle had conferred with Prime Minister Churchill, brought to a head a complex, undercover situation in which the British and other Allied governments had become involved as well as the Americans and fighting French.

British Seek Solution
Earlier in the day it was disclosed that the British were sending a number of diplomatic and political experts to North Africa to help clear up the situation.

The foreign office later issued a statement explaining that a British civil liaison officer had been attached to the office of Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, American commander of all Allied forces in North Africa, to "keep his majesty's government informed of political developments."

Eisenhower himself has made no comment except that the present arrangement was working well.

In the midst of the furor, the Vichy radio announced that Marshal Petain had stripped Darlan of all his public functions and military commands—the powers under which Darlan insists he still acts with the marshal's mandate.

White Estimates B. & O. Net Income Of $34,065,000

BALTIMORE, Nov. 16 (AP)—President Roy Barton White estimated today at the 116th annual meeting of Baltimore and Ohio Railroad stockholders that the net income of the road for 1942, after all taxes and fixed charges, will be $34,065,000.

He said that from this the company could add $7,539,000 to the capital fund and appropriate $19,895,500 for the sinking fund, leaving $6,631,500 for working capital and other corporate purposes.

Wage costs due to pay boosts were expected to increase $15,500,000 for the current year, while increases in freight and passenger rates and other charges would yield additional revenue of $10,750,000.

The B. & O. ordered twenty-three locomotives and 2,000 freight cars for 1942 delivery, White added, but only three locomotives have been delivered because of the steel shortages.

The stockholders reelected directors.

Much Damage at Genoa
The Italian high command said that "further very large damage" was caused at Genoa, and that four persons were killed and twenty-three injured.

Like attacks by United States air force Flying Fortresses and consolidated Liberators Saturday on Axis submarine bases at La Pallice and St. Nazaire in France, the RAF's steady pounding of Genoa fitted the pattern of Allied strategy.

A determined effort is being made to cripple the enemy's sea power and ocean transport while exploiting the Allies' own to the fullest in the Mediterranean offensives.

Since Oct. 22, the eve of the British offensive against Marshal Rommel in Egypt, the RAF has made six attacks on Genoa at a cost of only nine planes. Its value as a terminal of the Axis lifeline to Africa is believed to have been seriously impaired.

when they were challenged by French soldiers.

Situation Is Obscure
Actually the military situation within the French protectorate was obscure.

Unofficial reports said new American contingents were disembarking at several points on the North African coast.

Up to tonight the word from official Allied sources was that the powerful British-American force under General Kenneth A. N. Anderson, commander of the British First army, was moving into Tunisia from Algeria as fast as possible, according to plan.

It was obvious, however, that preliminary action in Tunisia was being fought by this combined force, in addition to the holding operations which are being conducted against the German invaders by those French troops who have rallied to the banner of General Henri Giraud.

The formal Axis announcement of the "landing" of troops in Tunisia indicated strongly that Hitler had chosen the protectorate for his last, desperate stand in all of Africa.

Axis Forces in Flight
To the east, in Libya, the main body of the beaten German Africa Corps and its straggling Italian allies had fled at last to the vicinity of El Aghella, below the Gulf of Sirte.

There, the exhausted remains of Marshal Erwin Rommel's once-proud army of the desert was being mercilessly punished by British air attack.

The nearest port of escape, Bengasi, was burning from the bombs of United States heavy aircraft.

There was no sign that the enemy columns in Libya would make a stand at El Aghella, or even stem their rout short of Tripoli.

One report said Rommel himself, had been called to Munich by Hitler to "explain."

From Malta, long-range fighters and bombers of the RAF struck alternately, by both day and night, at the Axis concentrations at the airport near Tunis, the capital of Tunisia.

Attack Airdrome
Three times between last Saturday and dawn Sunday, RAF fighters and bombers blasted the El Aouina airdrome outside Tunis.

In the first attack, at dusk Saturday, twin-engine fighters burned up six grounded transports and bombers.

After dark, bombers made two low-level attacks with both high explosive and incendiary bombs. One of the fighters flew so low that he skimmed under high tension cables, and the bombers came back to base covered with dust and mortar tossed up by the explosion of their bombs.

One Heinkel seaplane was shot to pieces enroute to the target. No RAF planes were lost.

Home based British bombers hit Genoa, the Italian port most important for communications with Africa.

It was the fourth attack on Genoa this month, and the Italian high command acknowledged the damage to "residential districts" was "very large."

An Allied announcement broadcast from the Morocco radio said the Axis, in an unstated period, had lost forty-two planes off the Tunisian coast, apparently while attacking Allied shipping. It said a total of nineteen enemy planes had been set afire on the Tunis airdrome.

There was no confirmation of German reports that the Italian fleet had ventured into the western Mediterranean.

Pacific Victory

resent a positive setback to the Americans. The Japanese have gained naval victories.

In a Spanish language transmission to South America Tokyo added up some towering figures and then said:

"These brilliant achievements are the most efficacious proof of the complete debacle of enemy attempts made against the invincible Japanese navy, which will fulfill the destiny of victorious battles in the sea, in the air, and on the ground by landing its force to cleanse the island of enemies."

A penetration through the fog of such verbiage indicated that the Japanese were speaking of nothing more than the Solomon's action of Oct. 26, after which they made exaggerated claims of having sunk three American aircraft carriers, one battleship, three cruisers and a destroyer.

Southern Senators Battle Attempt To Abolish Poll Tax

Filibusters To Discuss Misplaced Commas in Debate Today

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP)—Filibustering southern senators baffled backers of the anti-poll tax bill again today, and announced that they would devote most, if not all, of tomorrow's Senate session to weighty discussions of misplaced commas.

All the parliamentary strategists in the book were trotted out today as Senator Barkley of Kentucky, majority leader, tried in vain to call up the measure outlawing the poll tax as a requirement for voting in elections involving federal offices.

(States levying such a poll tax are Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, Virginia and Texas.)

The parliamentary situation is such that if Barkley can move, during the first two hours of a Senate session, to take the bill up for consideration, his motion is not debatable.

Southerners Filibuster
But Barkley could not make the motion today because the southerners resorted to such time-consuming devices as nine quorum calls, and a roll call on a motion by Senator O'Daniel (D-Tex.) to consider a bill prohibiting liquor and vice in the vicinity of military establishments.

O'Daniel's motion was beaten, 44 to 19.

Senator George (D-Ga.) told reporters tonight the southerners probably would insist upon the reading tomorrow of the journal of today's proceedings and "a correction of any inaccuracies which may appear."

"There might," he said, "be a lot of misplaced commas in the journal that require correction and debate."

Barkley told the Senate he had "no complaint" and "no feeling" against opponents of the measure despite their resort "to every parliamentary device to prevent consideration."

Scores Absent Senators
Barkley chided absent senators, saying they showed greater interest in the bill before the election than afterward.

Senator Brewster (R-Maine), remarking that Barkley was looking at the Republican side, asserted attendance had been high on that side of the chamber.

"If I turned toward the Republican side, it was an inadvertence," Barkley replied.

Senator Connally (D-Tex.) said that a lot of senators who would have to vote for the bill "don't want it to come up because they think it would be disrupting to the Democratic party."

"Really in their hearts they don't want to bother with this thing," he said. Maybe a lot of senators were for the reform before election and since the election is over they don't want this 'onward Christian Soldiers'."

Connally repeated previous charges that Barkley was trying to administer the "coup de grace" to the Democratic party after it came out of the election "nearly prostrate."

"must be ruled perpetually by some nation's colonial imperialism."

Asks United War Plan
"Our most immediate common need is of course a united military plan arrived at by a board of strategy representatives not alone of the United States and Great Britain but representing likewise our other Allies," he continued. "Even such obviously essential cooperation has not yet been brought about."

"It is true we are beginning to work with the British. That is comparatively easy, for we are possessed of the same linguistic and cultural heritage. But we must learn equally well to work with Russians and Chinese in the arduous task of today."

A war won without a purpose is a war won without victory, Willkie declared, and he cited the American revolution as the outstanding example of a war fought with a purpose—not hatred of Englishmen but love of freedom which subsequently was established.

It has become an almost historical truism, he said, that the first World War was a war without victory, for although Wilson stated the purpose in eloquent terms to make the world safe for democracy "we found that we and our allies were not really agreed on that purpose."

Suggests Agreement
Agreement in principle must be won now, he said, and this agreement must exist not just among the leaders themselves.

"Unless the British people know the way we are thinking in America, and take it to heart, and unless we have a similar idea of what they are thinking in England and in the commonwealth, there can be no more hope of agreement," Willkie said. "We must know what the people of Russia and China aim for and we must let them know our aims."

"It is the utmost folly—it is just short of suicide—to take the position that citizens of any country should hold their tongues for fear of causing distress to the immediate and sometimes tortuous policies of their leaders. We cannot fight this war in silence, whatever our experts say.

"Because if we fight in silence those same experts will, in the end, even winning the war, win nothing but blood and ashes."

To those who are fearful, Willkie said he wished to point out an inescapable fact: "Today in a world reduced in size by industrial and transportation developments, even our present standard of living in America cannot be maintained unless the exchange of goods flows more freely over the whole world."

enemy, comprising a large portion of his fleet, were attacked by our surface forces in two heavy night engagements in the vicinity of Guadalcanal. They were also severely damaged by our aircraft, submarines and motor torpedo boats.

"As a result all enemy forces were either destroyed or driven back and a major victory was obtained by our gallant forces."

"Report of own and enemy losses have been announced by the Navy department."

Nimitz said actual losses of the enemy couldn't be determined until Vice Admiral W. F. Halsey, commander of the South Pacific area, and his unit commanders returned to their bases and made full reports.

The Japanese loss of life may be the greatest they ever suffered. Nimitz said an estimate somewhere between 20,000 and 40,000 might fit the figure of the Japanese on the sunken transports.

"The transports were jammed full," Admiral Nimitz reported. He indicated it was an all-out Japanese effort to recapture Guadalcanal and New Guinea.

"I know I'd be sweating and bleeding if I had to explain such a loss," the admiral said, in answer to a question wondering what the Japanese commanders thought of the battle's outcome.

British Closing In on Bengasi To Trap Rommel

British Eighth Army Still Pursuing Tattered Axis Forces

By EDWARD KENNEDY

CAIRO, Nov. 16 (AP)—British Eighth army closed in swiftly on Bengasi tonight as the disordered remnants of Marshal Erwin Rommel's beaten forces raced toward the narrow passage at El Aghella for a possible stand to save the face of their commander (reported by Reuters to be facing Hitler's wrath at Munich).

The important forward air base at Martuba, south of Derna, was occupied by the British Sunday. The vanguard of the fleeing Germans and Italians already was beyond Bengasi headed for El Aghella at the base of the Libyan hump 120 miles southwest of the supply port.

The haggard enemy forces were scattered all along the coastal area from Tocran Kust east of Bengasi, to Agedabia, and British and American planes were pounding them without mercy, adding hourly to the 75,000 casualties already officially listed.

Destroy Six Planes
Eighth army planes from Malta spanned the 200 miles of Mediterranean to Tunis, destroying six large grounded German planes and damaging others in a low-level attack on the airdrome at dusk Saturday. Medium bombers returned that night to attack repair shops and hangars. Their action was in support of the British First army and its United States Allies moving through Western Tunisia in a coordinated drive to clear all Africa of the enemy.

The British think the shattered Africa Corps may attempt a stand at El Aghella, 400 miles east of the chief Libyan supply base of Tripoli. There the geography approximates that of the El Alamein line in Egypt where the British drive started.

Practically impassable salt marshes to the south narrow the maneuverable passageway to about thirty miles which Rommel in the past has studded liberally with mine fields. It was at El Aghella that he halted the last British offensive and recoiled to drive the Eighth army back into Egypt.

Axis Survivors Desperate
Rommel's survivors, however, have lost so much equipment that they are virtually impotent, the British say. But a determined rear guard stand at the defile might slow the British into a frontal attack.

This would be costly to both armies, but the British believe Rommel imperatively needs time to land reinforcements and material or see his remaining force utterly destroyed or surrendered.

Already the Martuba airdrome, less than 300 miles from El Aghella, was in use for ceaseless attacks on the routed foe. Bengasi was raided heavily by United States and British planes which set fires visible for sixty miles.

Peoples Bank
Of Cumberland*Modern Treatment of Tuberculosis Has Psychological and Humanitarian AnglesBy LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The modern treatment of tuberculosis has advanced along many lines that do not have strictly to do with the actual medical treatment. These are concessions to the fact that the tuberculous patient is a human being, has a mind and needs something to occupy it during the process of cure. They are psychological and humanitarian in scope.

Rest Essential

Rest is still the essential feature of tuberculosis treatment, whether there is also some surgical manipulation such as pneumothorax done or not. And rest in tuberculosis treatment really means rest. It means rest in bed for at least the first six months every day, both day and night, and perhaps practice rest with limited activity for a year or more after that.

Now you can read just so much, even if you like to read. And you can knit or play solitaire just so long before your mind begins to get fuzzy. So the rest becomes quite a burden.

In fact, in the old days the prospective patient dreaded the rest more than he did any other feature of the treatment. And when he got started to resting, he didn't relish it any better than he did in the anticipation.

Make Rest Profit

But every hospital for the care of the tuberculous invalid now has special workers whose sole duty it is to make the enforced rest profitable and free from boredom. I know of a watchmaker and repairer who was encouraged to keep on with his vocation, at least part time, even while he was in bed.

Occupational therapy of a light kind is instituted as soon as practicable and many people learn a trade in a tuberculosis sanitarium. Of course, the radio has been a godsend to such patients. It often requires considerable ingenuity to work out something the patient will be able to do and which interests him, but that is the job of the occupational therapist and psychologist.

Continue Studies

There is no reason why children who are under treatment for tuberculosis should interrupt their school work. In the best institutions a light, airy school room is fitted up and beds are wheeled in and serve desks like bed trays are used. When the children "graduate" from such an institution, they are not behind other children of their age in education.

Tuberculosis work, you see, has assumed vast ramifications. It is far different from the old days when the patient was regarded as a kind of parish.

To eradicate tuberculosis and to keep up the mental and spiritual development of the patients with tuberculosis while undergoing treatment is the duty of all of us. It costs money. Do your share by buying Christmas seals this year.

Christmas Gifts Must

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP)—The Post Office department has repeated its warning that gifts must be mailed by Dec. 1 to assure delivery before Christmas.

Smith W. Purdum, second assistant postmaster general, said that shortages of transportation facilities and personnel, coupled with expectations of a record volume of mail, meant that if the bulk of mailing occurred as late as in other years it "simply cannot be distributed in time."

Swollen Bureaucracy Must Be Curtailed

ONE of the big tasks to which the increased congressional strength of the Republicans can now more effectively address itself is that of paring down the enormous and excessive bureaucracy which the New Deal has developed in the national capital. It is good to note that Representative Martin, the Republican House leader, has announced his support of a movement looking to accomplishment of the task.

Certainly, the scandalous extravagance involved in the swollen federal bureaucracy is a luxury the nation can ill afford. Indeed, cannot afford at all, at a time when it is groaning under an unprecedented tax burden, which is to become more onerous; and when it has been stripped of its young manhood and has sent a great proportion of the remaining manhood into war production plants.

The people generally have been aware in a sort of superficial way that bureaucracy has grown abnormally, but it probably can suffer a shock about it in noting some comparative figures furnished by the magazine Time.

"The number of men now serving in the armed forces," it says, "is about twenty-five per cent more than in World War I. The number employed in war industry is about ten per cent greater, but the United States has now 2,751,500 men and women on the federal payroll (up 280 per cent from World War I) and 3,617,632 working for state and local governments (up 100 per cent from World War I). Total bureaucracy: 5,589,132, or about a half million more than now serve in the armed forces."

The New York Herald Tribune reports unanimous agreement among competent observers in Washington that the federal government could function adequately with a fraction of its present swarm of employees and that their number is a positive detriment to the war effort. "Too many of them," it says, "mill about aimlessly, stumbling over one another," with "hardly a department or an agency that would not be getting better results with a smaller staff, in some cases cut to a fifth."

This is just another version of the use of taxpayers' money to strengthen the New Deal and to garner votes for it, such as was previously exercised in work relief and other subsidies. The recent elections carried a mandate to stop all this sort of thing, and the Republicans should go about stopping it as speedily as possible along with the aid of those sensible Democrats in Congress who have had the intestinal fortitude to oppose it, but whose efforts have been unable to carry any farther heretofore than voices crying in a wilderness.

Yes, the New Tax Bill Is Quite Complicated

OBSERVATION was made recently in this department that, on the basis of a report about the huge size of the new federal tax bill, the indications were that the new tax returns would be more intricate, complicated and confusing than ever.

Confirmation of that observation is coming to hand. Example is to be found in one mystifying section, No. 210, under the heading of Net Operating Loss Deduction Adjustment:

"(a) Section 711 (a) (1) (relating to the excess profits credit computed under income credit) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following subparagraph:

"(J) Net operating loss deduction shall be adjusted as follows:

"(i) In computing the net operating loss for any taxable year under section 122 (a), and the net income for any taxable year under section 122 (b), no deduction shall be allowed for any excess profits tax imposed by this subchapter, and, if the excess profits credit for such taxable year was computed under section 714, the deduction for interest shall be reduced by the amount of any reduction under paragraph (2) (B) for such taxable year; and

"(ii) In lieu of the reduction provided in section 122 (c), such reduction shall be in the amount by which the excess profits net income computed with the exceptions and limitations specified in section 122 (d) (1), (2), (3), and (4) and computed without regard to subparagraph (B), without regard to any credit for dividends received, and without regard to any credit for interest received provided in section 26 (a) exceeds the excess profits net income (computed without the net operating loss deduction)."

The newly chosen Congress ought to take a crack at this monstrosity and do what it can to reduce it to some sort of simplification—and sanity.

Elmer Davis Is Getting Somewhere

THE OFFICE OF WAR INFORMATION under Elmer Davis is putting into effect some decision which serve to emphasize the shortage of sense that has existed in Washington.

Davis is making some progress in his campaign to provide the American people with as much correct, up-to-the-minute information on the war as is consistent with the obvious necessity of keeping military secrets secret.

The OWI is also making progress in other fields. It has just made important rulings curtailing "non-essential information activity" by government agencies—a long-needed move. The OWI has curtailed or eliminated 523 government publications and has ordered discontinuance of the practice of mailing press releases from Washington to newspapers throughout the country. For ten years this has been an insult to newspaper editors, few of whom even read the output of these simple Washington press agents.

With a few exceptions, news material will be released to local offices through field offices. Field offices will issue only material adapted to local interests. Distribution of full texts of statistical or technical reports is discontinued. Summaries of texts and speeches will be issued when the information merits it.

That last sentence is the crux of the matter. If it is found that the information seldom if ever merits it, good.

This seems to be a step in the right direction. It means that government news will be issued not on a helter-skelter basis but under editorial control. This, of course, is not as ideal as the pre-New Deal method of permitting the newspapers to gather their own news. But it will mean a huge saving in paper alone over recent practices and it should pave the way for the release of a large number of government employees unnecessarily on the public pay roll.

If the Office of War Information continues on its present course, it can do much to run the New Deal press agents out of Washington and start them on the road to making an honest living.

How To Make Food Quotas Equitable

FEDERAL AGENCIES charged with the duty of allocating available food supplies throughout the country adopted a percentage or quota basis.

First an arbitrary date was chosen, after which dealers were advised that they might not sell more than a certain percentage of their previous volume. This has guided coffee distribution, and its application to other primary foods is proposed.

The procedure probably is reasonable for communities where the population has remained unchanged or has actually declined due to the draft, etc. If a city had 50,000 population a year ago and has the same number of inhabitants now, all its people are affected equally by the reduction of quotas. But if a city has made an unusual gain in population, both old and new residents get less of the rationed foods than the program seeks to allot.

Quotas figured on the actual or estimated population of various centers where war efforts are being concentrated would be fair. Rationing food on previous levels that no longer exist obviously is discriminatory and the effect is to penalize and restrict the very centers that are supposed to be doing the most to aid the war effort. Some people put it the other way, saying the war effort is doing the most to aid these centers, but no matter.

The result is that coffee and so on are on an inequitable basis when population shifts are ignored.

Isn't it about time for Herr Goebbels to announce that the Nazis had never intended to take Stalingrad, anyway?

A Problem at Bridge

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I met a friend and he pulled a bridge problem from his pocket and said: "I'll guarantee you can't work this problem in fifteen minutes."

All bridge players are confident of their powers so I smiled at his challenge and went to work. I'd have it all finished in five minutes or ten at the most. I was good at working bridge problems. . . . I thought.

The idea was to make a grand slam at hearts against any defense. . . . It wouldn't be difficult. I'd trump clubs and take out hearts and play my diamonds. . . . No, that wouldn't do. I'd trump spades and play two diamonds before playing the hearts. But one of my opponents would trump the first diamond if I tried that. . . . I'd have to think a little about it. . . . So I thought and thought and scratched my head and neglected my work—and the five minutes ran to ten and the ten to fifteen and the fifteen minutes ran to twenty before I solved that trivial, annoying problem. So my little thrill of pride was lost in humiliation.

And when it was all over I thought to myself: "If I'd only used my brains; if I'd sat down at once and considered the problem in front of me instead of fumbling and experimenting I could have seen through it in three minutes." But even though I worked the problem finally, I WASTED seventeen minutes in the doing of it.

After that, I wandered off into moral reflections on how much time and energy and brains we waste in this living of ours. . . . Life sets many a knotty problem before us and in the end, after much suffering and worrying, we solve most of those puzzles. We solve them, hurting ourselves, damaging other lives, wasting years of precious time—and then we say to ourselves: "If we had only known, if we had only used our brains or even followed the clear directions of our hearts, all this would have been settled long ago and we'd have no bitter memories or scolding remorse. If we ever have another chance, we'll know what to do and will make no such mistakes again."

So from fifty-two playing cards and their accidental arrangement, we rise to thoughts of living and the far more complicated problem of getting the maximum of happiness from our days.

African Campaign Changes Eastern Fuel Situation

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Some fancy inside administrative clawing attended Mr. Ickes' recommendation to Donald Nelson that fuel and gas rationing consumption be curtailed more sharply in the East.

As Fuel Co-ordinator Ickes knew (but the public did not), the Henderson Office of Price Administration had taken an immovable stand against the Ickes recommendation in advance consultations. OPA did not want any further curtailment, and especially not a decrease in gas coupon values to three instead of four gallons (a twenty-five percent cut).

There was much inner tilting back and forth between them, before Mr. Ickes told Nelson the East would be short about 80,000 barrels of gasoline a day and 139,000 barrels of oil—apparently leaving the decision as to what to do about it up to Mr. Nelson.

But Mr. Ickes took some steps on the side to assure action. He privately told the major oil companies, army and navy requests must be given prior consideration before any consumer business, thereby proposing to leave less gas and fuel for public distribution, despite OPA.

Needed in East for Africa

Official reason for the new curtailment commotion is that the navy and army now want their oil and gas delivered on the Eastern Seaboard. Up to the African campaign, they filled their Atlantic needs largely at gulf ports.

Also, the transportation situation is showing signs of deterioration. Only a few ocean tankers, so slow as to be of no use to the army and navy, are still in private operation. Railroad tank cars are showing the wear of the terrific pace and repair shops are crowded.

But some steps besides cutting coupon values can be taken. A great leakage in unnecessary consumption is supposed to exist in "S" books. On December 1, all such commercial users will be rationed on a basis of mileage used, instead of coupon values. This in itself may make up the shortages Ickes foresees.

Work Week Problem

That Truman committee report demanding that the unions go to a forty-eight hour week for work was written by a union labor man, Senator Kilgore, of West Virginia, who is considered a Mine Worker representative. New Dealer Senator Jim Mead is also on the committee, which has a strongly pro-administrative reputation.

Not only from this, but from other congressional evidence, it is becoming plain the forty-hour week arks, "rent is to be changed. Obviously, the government cannot try a draft of manpower or take many firm steps to promote war production in that way, with union labor enjoying a forty-hour week, and working on the average 42.5 hours.

This question, however, is primarily a matter of pay. Time and a half or double time is generally paid above forty hours to union men. The miners, for instance, who until recently have been on the five-day week, are now going to work six, but they will get time and a half for the sixth day.

This practice opposes every administration purpose—the holding down of income to prevent inflation, price limitations to keep down war and living costs, etc.

The election results have given impetus to the prevailing congressional impression that the unions have not sacrificed as much in the war effort as other classes of citizens.

If the matter is allowed to drift on without solution, it is likely the congressional taxmakers will act in the next tax bill—imposing perhaps a fifty percent tax on time and a half or overtime as "excess earnings," or requiring such earnings to be invested in government bonds.

Poll-Tax Measure Is Called Challenge To the States as Government Units

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Last Saturday, in the Senate, the bill scheduled for consideration was what is called the "poll-tax bill." When the Senate opened, only twenty-six senators were present, less than a quorum. Thereupon Democratic leader Barkley moved that the sergeant-at-arms be directed to "arrest" absent members. This led to startling headlines and radio brevities. The whole story be understood is vital to every citizen of every state.

The poll tax is a requirement in eight states that citizens pay a small tax as a qualification for voting, usually $1 or $1.50. I have said "eight states," not "eight southern states"—though in fact the states still keeping the poll tax at this time are southern. But at one time the poll tax, or an equivalent requirement that the voter own taxable property, existed in practically all the older states. Some northern states kept the poll tax, sometimes called a "head tax," until recent years. Some northern states still require that the voter be not a pauper—they deny the vote to state charges. Gradually, such requirements have been dropped by most states. Southern states have been dropping the poll tax—Louisiana and Florida have dropped it within the last few years. Tennessee is about to drop it.

No observer can express any intelligent conclusion as to how right or wrong Maas was, in the light of the naval facts that have been made public.

The navy has given out less news than any other government bureau in town since the war started (and before) and, in this case, declined to make even unofficial comment.

Sergeants Have Soft Spots

From the Christian Science Monitor

The hard-boiled Sergeant may have his sentimental side. The trick is to find it—and what Private wouldn't like to learn that trick! A recent radio report described how one Private won the affection of his Sergeant and vice versa, when both took off their coats—and stripes—and argued a case out, Marine-style. But even more convincing is a story from Johnstown, New York.

It goes this way: Neighbors who felt that a family party at a Sergeant's home was too noisy called out the police. But the Sergeant retreated to the roof and threatened to shoot. It is reported he stood off the entire town police force, plus war council auxiliaries and sheriffs. But he came down quietly to talk things over when the police captain reminded him he had lent him two dollars.

Yes, a Sergeant has his soft side, and Privates who prefer to find it without recourse to Marquis of Queensberry rules may learn from the experience of the police captain. Only perhaps it is easier for a police captain than for a Private to spare a two-dollar bill.

members. This led to startling headlines and radio brevities. The whole story be understood is vital to every citizen of every state.

The poll tax is a requirement in eight states that citizens pay a small tax as a qualification for voting, usually $1 or $1.50. I have said "eight states," not "eight southern states"—though in fact the states still keeping the poll tax at this time are southern. But at one time the poll tax, or an equivalent requirement that the voter own taxable property, existed in practically all the older states. Some northern states kept the poll tax, sometimes called a "head tax," until recent years. Some northern states still require that the voter be not a pauper—they deny the vote to state charges. Gradually, such requirements have been dropped by most states. Southern states have been dropping the poll tax—Louisiana and Florida have dropped it within the last few years. Tennessee is about to drop it.

States Ending Poll Tax

The poll tax is being abolished by local action, by the states themselves, voluntarily. But the pending bill in Congress proposes that the poll tax be abolished by Congress. By this bill, if passed, Congress would assert that the federal government has power to dictate qualifications for voting in any and every state, as respects voting for president, vice president and members of Congress. When and if a senator from New York for example, votes for this bill, that senator asserts that the federal government has the right to fix the qualifications for voting in New York. And so as to every one of the forty-eight states.

At present, every state fixes its own qualifications, and each has different qualifications. These varying qualifications deal with length of residence required in the state and in the voting district, length of time a voter must have registered preceding the election, ability to read and write, the right of one citizen to challenge another when he appears at the polls, and other qualifications.

Fixing the qualifications for voting is the most fundamental right a state has. Once that right is taken away, a state can hardly be called a government at all. And once Congress takes away this right it is hard to conceive any right it cannot take away.

Dual System Imperiled

Taking this right from the states would be the beginning of a process by which the states would become little more than geographical designations, such as "New England" or "the Mid-West." As it was put by Senator George, of Georgia:

"I do not see how in the long run the dual system of government can prevail in America if the present tendency to invade the states shall continue."

What is at stake in the pending bill in Congress is the existence of the states as units of government.

This would be true at any time. It is vital now for a special reason. For there is under way in America a tendency toward revolution in government. As Senator Connally, of Texas, put it, "We are in a great struggle for representative government, constitutional in form." One line along which the tendency moves is toward reduction of the power and functions of state and local government—with corresponding enlargement of federal power. This issue—centralization of government at Washington—is at the very heart of the pending bill.

Poll-Tax Laws Apply to All

For clarity of thinking, and removal of prejudice, one widespread misconception should be removed. In radio news and press headlines dealing with the pending bill, the words "race" and "race discrimination" appear. Some advocates of the pending bill charge that the poll tax discriminates against negroes. This is not true. The poll-tax laws, where they exist, apply to all. Any negro can pay the poll-tax and vote, and many do, precisely the same as whites. Such discrimination as does exist in some southern states is not done by the poll tax, and would not be removed by the pending bill.

What is said here is necessarily brief, and omits much. It is said that opposition to the pending bill will take the form of a filibuster. By whatever name, it is imperative that there be time enough and debate enough to make the country fully acquainted with the bill and its effects. The debate ought to include discussion by those Republican senators, and northern Democratic ones, who oppose the bill.

A Condition, Not a Theory

From the Charleston, W. Va., Daily Mail

At a recent meeting of the Southern States Co-operative at Richmond, some realistic attention was given to the American farm problem as affected by and as it affects the war.

It was pointed out that of 12,000,000 agricultural workers before the war, 2,000,000 already have left and that the ranks of those remaining are thinning rapidly. They are going to one of two places: to the army, or to industrial jobs in the city paying two, three and even four times as much in wages for jobs demanding little more than half as many hours. As a result of this situation, a food and fibre shortage are inevitable, delegates to the convention pointed out, unless something is done to stop this desertion of the land.

Whatever theories one may hold as to the proper relative position of farm and non-farm income, we are faced, it would seem to this newspaper, with a condition which demands two steps:

First, a closer approach to the city wage and the city hour level for agricultural workers by raising agricultural wages and lengthening industrial hours. That calls for higher prices for farm products, whether we like it or not.

Second, draft deferment for all farm workers, whether they are employed on large or small farms, so long as they are producing for public consumption.

We simply must have plenty of farm production. It is even more important than the manufacture of weapons and should be given a position second to none in national consideration.

Change in Tide Of War Muddles Capital Officials

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—The suddenness of the war tide's change from a decidedly pro-Axis direction into one somewhat in the democracies' favor has muddled official Washington considerably.

It isn't that officialdom is other-worldly than gratified but it finds it difficult to readjust itself on such short notice. It went to bed one night recently, trying to think up broadcasts calculated to discount public discouragement and awoke the next morning to tackle the job of staving off popular over-optimism.

The administration obviously seeks to give the impression that it picked its time for launching our north-westerly African invasion well in advance of the actual beginning of the offensive and sprung it precisely at the selected moment.

I have my personal doubts of the accuracy of this version.

Secret from Administration

The administration folk new, to a dateline, just when they had a congressional election coming on. Naturally they likewise know to a certainty that if, as the November 3 polling places were in the very act of opening, the voters had been informed of our new African operation, they'd have registered an absolutely unprecedented victory.

Instead the African performance, though literally already in its incipency, still was a secret, from the administration itself, I'd guess, and the party got a kick in the slats that was a record-breaker.

Now, it's all very well to contend that our administration is too high-minded to let a little matter like a congressional majority figure in its reasonings relative to war strategy; only I'm betting that a trifling question of November 2, 3 or 4 wouldn't have influenced that African announcement, if Washington had had it available on election eve. Instead, the disclosure would have been militarily advantageous to us, from the legislative standpoint.

Military Responsibility

No, our sea, aviation and potential land invasion commands clearly discerned and democracies' possibilities of a huge gain against the Axis by an instant swipe at the enemy and took a crack at it on their own responsibility.

Right now beaten candidates at the last congressional election are complaining that they were licked because Uncle Sam was so slow in breaking into offensive belligerency. And, at the very time that these speeches were being written, he was landing in northwestern Africa—but the speeches' authors didn't know it.

Administration spokesmen aren't afraid even yet badly enough in reverse to make a speedy democratic victory over the Axis a practicality.

They're not afraid that we won't win, but that we won't win fast enough.

South America Lining Up

It's interesting to note that our Latin American neighbors are lining up with us more and more solidly. Argentina, as we know, has been a little balky, but northwestern Africa is a closer associate of the Argentine Republic than we are. If we're going to dominate that "bulge" it'll pay the Argentines to get in cahoots with us.

Along the South American east coast they speak of "Africano."

They consider the white folk there as part of themselves—which they are, indeed.

And Spain figures in it.

Spanish Dictator Franco is totalitarian, but his country is principally democratic, as I know from former residence there. He licked his democracy in a hard civil war. However, he doesn't hold it very vigorously. Herr Hitler himself has served notice that he doesn't intend to interfere there.

It all mixes into Africa materially.

Closely Tied

Brazil (a traditional friend of this country) and the northwestern African continent are very closely tied together with the U. S. A.

Even Argentina, if it stays pro-Axis (which it won't do), won't make much difference. It's in too much of a minority—seven or eight millions versus Brazil's thirty or forty millions. Up the coast, to the northward, there are a few more millions, but not enough to count materially.

We think of all these countries as western hemispheric. They are, geographically, but they enter into the wartime dope, globally speaking.

And some of 'em sidewise western Africa.

It isn't a merely international muss, naturally; it's inter-global.

To think of it as inter-American is just to localize it.

Children Whose Mothers Work Need Protection

Dr. Myers, Proponent of Longer School Day, Suggests Program

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Yesterday I stated that the public school will have to provide a much longer day in order to protect the child of the working mother. If juvenile delinquency and crime are to be held in check, I pointed out that this could not be done by requiring teachers now on the job to bear a heavier load, but would call instead for volunteers among adults, and high school children trained and supervised by competent persons.

This longer school day should not be more hours at lessons but at directed play and activities. There should, of course, be a period of an hour or so above the sixth or seventh grade for directed study. Anyway, a quiet hour or so would be wholesome for the children.

There could be a period for the grade children to read what they like and for some of them to be read to. With practically no training, older children could profitably read aloud to small groups of younger children.

Games and Activities

The varsity teams could be "frozen" for the duration. Let the physical education teachers in their regular day classes train the students to direct younger children in small groups at games and activities during, before and after regular school hours in the gym and on the playground. They should place special emphasis on games which do not require running nor much space.

A large part of the program should consist of arts and crafts, which need not require much equipment and are not very different from many of the creative group activities in some of the modern elementary classrooms.

The program should make available a number of volunteer adults, with the purpose not so much to direct as to provide a stabilizing atmosphere. For this purpose the retired principal or teacher should prove especially helpful.

All school children whose parents cannot provide convincing evidence that they will have adequate protection and guidance at home, should be required to be at school throughout this longer day.

Help Less Fortunate

Let the fathers and mothers who can care properly for their own children be the first to see that the less fortunate children shall also be

CHAPTER FORTY

TOINETTE closed the door after Mary and whirled back to face her publicity agent furiously.

"Why do you come into my cottage without knocking?"

"I use ethyl," said Link.

"What?"

"Skip it, Frenchy. We'll say my hands were full. I had a cigaret in one and the other was in my pocket."

He laughed comfortably at her dramatic choke of anger, ground out his cigaret in her cloisonne ash-tray, and helped himself to another. Link was an angular man, sparse of hair. He'd been around everywhere, was fond of saying he'd had all the corners knocked off. His features were sharp, like his mind. He regarded the temperamental star now with undisguised amusement.

"Never use the name of Jones when you're palming an alias off on me, honey." He lit a cigaret, blew out the match and tossed it floorward. "It's too obvious—even if I hadn't met her before. And listen, don't bother figuring out a big scene to play for the F. B. I. at Nordex. Because you aren't going to play it."

ToINETTE's fury mounted. "I weep play it if I want to!" She went close to the irritating man, her small hands clenching. "I weep help Bruce. I love him. Do you hear me? I love him! And I will help him and you can't stop me!"

"No. I can't stop you," shrugged Link honestly. "But I can tell you, it'll be the last big scene you'll ever play—as an actress." He grinned at her as she stared and bewildered him rising to combat the fury in her.

"What do you mean by that?" she scoffed.

Link draped himself over the arm of a velvet chair. "All the world knows you're French, kid," he rambled gently. "A few people know your home is in the occupied area. Maybe the F. B. I. knows. Anyway, they lost no time in keeping a sharp eye on Bruce Martin when he went over to Nordex just after he had been engaged to you."

"But that's ridiculous!" he reminded her smoothly. "If they've heard rumors that your Uncle Albert is Montford now lives in Berlin. They get around, those rumors, and the F. B. I. has sharp ears."

Fear held her dark eyes on his face. "I did not know them!" she cried. "I saw them the once and I hated them! I can tell them that, I can tell them—"

"Yeah, you can tell 'em," Link drawled. "You can talk yourself right into a concentration camp for the duration if you want to. It's nothing to me. Nothing, except that I've worked like a dog to make a star of you. And now you want to throw away your career with some crazy stunt like this!"

She could stand it no longer. She threw herself into the divan and burst into a wild torrent of weeping. "But if they already know—" she cried hopelessly.

Link Jackson patted her shoulder. "Maybe they don't," he comforted. "Anyway, we can go on that assumption till they call you, can't we? Suppose you leave it to Uncle Link and get some sleep. You've got some lines to learn for the scene tomorrow, haven't you?" She nodded as her sobs began to subside.

Mary stood on the curb after her work was finished the next night. She had lingered, talking to Connie, hoping Danver would send for her to tell her Toinette had come in. So she had missed her usual bus and had to wait for the next. She didn't mind it. The day had been warm. Now the night was fragrant with the freshness of spring, with the low-hung, farish blue sky she loved. And then her heart abruptly skipped a beat as a familiar horn sounded at the curb. She turned as the door of the low-slung, gray car opened. She slipped into her old place on the soft leather seat and Bruce leaned across to close the door. All the peace in the world rushed over her as she returned his smile.

"I did a fool thing," he grinned. "Went to Danver and apologized for my general disposition tonight. Don't know what got into me."

Rapture flooded through her. "You did?" she cried.

"Then I drove around and around the block waiting for you. Have to stay in after school?"

She laughed. "Just talking." And she had thought he would be with Toinette tonight—thanking her! She asked guardedly, "Did Danver send for you?"

"No. Why should he?"

"I don't know. Just thought something new might have come up."

"Nothing except what happened to me—my brainstorm. Funny thing about it is I feel better. Danver was remarkably decent. He's a good guy when you're not on the wrong side of the fence. And he's in a tough spot here. I've been a pretty lousy thorn in his side."

Suddenly Mary knew Toinette had not been in to see Danver. She would, in some way, have cast her troubling shadow over the interview between the two men. This Bruce was a new Bruce—not torn by the bitterness and dark desires of the old—a man slowly feeling his way again in the sun, uncertain.

yet groping for confidence. She wanted to laugh, to cry, to shout at this freedom that came as a miracle from a heretofore silent heaven. But she sat quietly, listening as he talked and drove. Talked as if the flood gates of memory had been released in this freedom and were spilling out the pent-up waters that had embroiled him in their turgid depths.

He told her of his boyhood, of his rich and indulgent father, who encouraged his headstrong arrogance, taught him he could have anything he wanted. Then came the bitter awakening. On the heels of his father's death the loss of his estate, his infatuation for Toinette Vaughn and his refusal to accept second place in her life—and while he was still struggling with this blow to his pride, the trouble at Nordex.

"I guess I couldn't reconcile myself to being just one of the mob," he grinned slowly. "If I couldn't be de luxe, I wasn't going to play."

Mary had drunk in the story thirstily. It all rang right and true—the answer her heart had known always—explaining his crude bitterness, his unexpected gallantries, the deep hurt which made him so indifferent to his surroundings.

"I know," she said softly. "I felt that way, too, when I first went to work at Nordex. I'd always thought I was kind of special, too, because I'd planned a career. Remember my first night when you called me a weepy redhead? You laughed at me and I hated you. But it was what I needed."

He stopped the car just above the line of dashing breakers and switched off the lights. The silver trail of the moon struck across the dark, restless waters toward them.

"What I needed was a good, hard kick," he said slowly. "So we're even—because you gave it to me."

"I?" cried Mary, puzzled.

He turned to her with the flashing glance that always thrilled her. "The night I saw you with those things, and you wouldn't let me help you—because I was a cut lower than they were."

"No, Bruce!"

His arms were around her, pulling her to him till he could feel the wild beating of her heart. "Didn't you tell your heart about me?" His smile was sardonic. "That I'm a worthless heel?"

"I told it," whispered Mary. "It didn't agree. It said you were—pretty wonderful."

Her eyes looked into his, shining with rapturous wonder. His arm tightened about her.

"God bless it!" he cried in a broken voice. His lips were on hers in a kiss that flamed from tenderness to passion.

WARTIME CONSTIPATION WAS MY TROUBLE!

"And then I learned lack of 'bulk' is one of its common causes."

"And that a difference that made! You see, I knew this wartime living had upset my usual habits of working, sleeping and eating. But I overlooked the fact that in this rush, my meals were likely to be improperly balanced—and I just wasn't getting the 'bulk' I needed."

"And this very lack is one of the most frequent causes of wartime constipation. Medicinal laxatives gave me only temporary relief, because they don't correct the cause."

"But KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN gets right at the cause by supplying the needed 'bulk.' You just eat ALL-BRAN regularly and drink plenty of water. Why not try ALL-BRAN yourself? It's made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek."

DIARY OF A 5¢ SOFT DRINK

Saw Hank about noon. He was just back in camp from a morning on the rifle range. Squinting through a gunsight. Holding a lively, bucking Garand rifle on the target again and again. But at the camp canteen my frosty lift scored the bull's-eye with Hank.

Had a date with Bill in the afternoon. He'd been "downstairs" all day, loading coal. Sweaty, back-breaking work. Vital to the war. Vital to millions of families this winter. That's why I was glad to be on hand to give him a "quick-up."

Met Betty on the swing shift. She'd been running a precision drill for hours. Neck bent! Attention fixed! But when recess time came, I turned it into a pleasant bit of relaxation that made her keen for the job again.

So it goes . . . round the clock. More than a million and a half times each hour, Americans reach for soft drinks. Americans who are working, fighting, going all-out to win the war.

That means 24-hour duty for me. Any minute . . . every minute I'm ready to bring them a lift and a fresh start. Ready to bring them the same quality they've known for years as best by taste-test. And determined to maintain the quality, even if occasionally the quantity runs short.

To bring him home sooner

Natural gas and all industry are working night and day for Victory . . . at the earliest possible hour

To end this war in victory at the earliest possible hour is the hope of every family, every business man, every worker.

You, too, want the war to end quickly . . . because then HE can come home and resume his normal place in your home life.

Behind all our war production is the steady flame of Natural Gas. Without Natural Gas, war production would halt. That's why every possible step is being taken to see to it that Natural Gas is available to every war plant as needed.

So in your own use of Gas, consider how you may conserve it . . . as just another way in which you can help win the war—and bring HIM home sooner.

After the war, you'll be able to enjoy the comfort and convenience of vastly improved Gas appliances . . . that kitchen you've dreamed of owning, that ideal basement room. Just now the thing we all have to work for is . . . victory—and the return of our boys to peacetime pursuits.

Natural Gas is vital to war industries . . .

Use it wisely!

Eisenhower Pictures In Great Demand

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 (AP)—A picture supply company here says that in three days it had received orders for more than 250,000 pictures of Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander of American forces in North Africa.

The New York frame and picture company, which remembers the rush for photos of Admiral Dewey, Theodore Roosevelt and General Pershing, said the figure for General Eisenhower was three times their rate of demand for General Douglas MacArthur's picture when he was making his heroic stand at Bataan.

In opposition to the extravagant and frivolous nobility of their day, and the extreme ceremonies of the church, the Pilgrims and Puritans wore rather severe hats with large brims and conical crowns, usually black and devoid of trimming.

WALK... DON'T RUN (to the nearest entrance)

There's no need to rush to your favorite spot to buy up all the Carstairs White Seal in sight. Sure, lots of people are clamoring for it...because it suits the discerning taste of "The Man Who Cares." But don't worry...don't hurry...there'll be a steady supply of The Perfectly Balanced Blend for years to come, even though our distilling facilities are devoted 100% to the production of war materials.

"WOULDN'T ADOLF LIKE TO HAVE THIS!"

Like to have it? Why, he'd give Goering, Goebbels, Himmler and a dozen Panzer Divisions for it right now—and throw in Benito for good measure.

Yes, Adolf knows that America's Railroads represent the greatest transportation system in the world. Covering our Nation with a network of strategic rails...with 40,000 miles of track...2,000,000 units of equipment...operated by a loyal army of 1,400,000 skilled workers...the American Railroads are proving themselves, as never before, the lifelines of America.

Over these strategic rails are executed the orders of our Military and Naval leaders...troops to...guns to...planes to...tanks to...food to...Vital orders...executed smoothly, efficiently, on time.

As they shatter all wartime transportation records, the Railroads are prepared to continue keeping our steel lifelines open and flowing as military plans call for still greater movements of men and materials.

Peacetime foresight readied the railroads for their vital wartime role...a role that's indispensable in the strategic plans of the United Nations.

Commissioner Orr Wants Wiley Ford Bridge Reopened

Asks Council To Take Action; Several Orders Passed

Asking that action be taken to get the Wiley Ford bridge over the Potomac river from South Cumberland to the West Virginia side open, Commissioner of Police James Orr said yesterday at council meeting that the closed bridge increases the flow of traffic up town and causes much inconvenience.

City Solicitor Charles Z. Heskett said the matter is under advisement and plans are underway to have repairs made to the bridge by West Virginia and Maryland officials.

The bridge has been closed to traffic since the flood.

Lieut. John M. DeLaGrange, Army Air Force, San Antonio, Texas, in a letter protested against the leasing of the new airport to Arthur C. Hyde, Rockville, and the Council instructed the clerk to write the army man assuring him that all steps will be considered carefully.

A refund of $2.75 was ordered paid to Frank B. Foster, 460 Walnut street, for taxes paid in error.

A request from Queen City Lodge, No. 126, Knights of Pythias, asking permission for the Pythian Sisters to conduct a drive to raise funds for the purchase of ambulances for the armed forces was ordered referred to the War Appeals Committee.

Resolutions of respect were passed for Ward M. Eichelberger and Charles J. Cumiskey, former members of the Council who recently died.

Water consumption for the week ending yesterday was 62,460,000 gallons. The daily average was 8,923,000 gallons as compared to 8,763,000 for the same period last year. Lake Gordon is seven inches below the crest and Lake Koon three feet, eight inches below.

Southern States Directors Will Meet Thursday

R. C. Wilson of Rawlings, president of the board of directors of Southern States Cumberland Service, will preside when the board holds a conference at the Algonquin hotel here Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The directors will make a study of rural community needs, giving particular attention to the problems involved in getting produce from the farm to town and supplies from town to the farm. Also they will review the local cooperative program.

Speakers will include Chester Corryell of Cumberland Service and R. R. Furman, Winchester, Va., a representative of Southern States Cooperative.

Members of the board are Mr. Wilson and C. R. Armstrong, Rawlings; J. W. Hansel, Vale Summit; James A. Morgan, Frostburg; Wilbur L. Parrin, Flintstone; Ernest Reid, Cumberland; and Paul Yoder, Pinto.

Commercial Vehicle Operators Given Until Dec. 1 To Get Permits

An order of the Office of Defense Transportation, requiring all commercial motor vehicles to have a certificate of war necessity, will not go into effect until Dec. 1, Edward R. Gishburn, district manager, announced recently.

The order, known as General Order O. D. T. No. 21, was to become effective Nov. 15, Gishburn said, but because of the short time given to register all vehicles the date has been moved up to Dec. 1.

The Hagerstown office which includes twenty counties in Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Virginia will remain open from 8 a. m. until 8 p. m. daily until Dec. 1 to assist in filing applications, Gishburn said.

Disabled Sailors May Be Retained in Service

Enlisted men of the regular navy and naval reserve who have become disabled for general service by conditions originating in the line of duty may be retained in limited service for the convenience of the government, Chief Petty Officer George J. Carroll, local navy recruiter, announced yesterday.

During peacetime the disability may have led to discharge, Carroll said, but now the men concerned may be retained if the disability is of such a nature as not to interfere with his performing useful duty, and if retention on duty is not likely to aggravate the disability.

While not compelled to participate in Maryland's state-wide test last evening, Ridgeley, W. Va., observed the event and "it worked like a charm," according to Mayor Paul K. Morgan.

"Everything sailed along smoothly on this side of the Potomac," Morgan said, "and no violations were reported."

Plants Go the Limit

War production plants may be excused for a period of ten minutes, according to a new edict issued by Col. Henry S. Barrett, state director of Air Raid Precaution Services, but the Kelly-Springfield plant blurted out for the entire thirty-one minutes as did the plant of the Celanese Corporation of America at Amctelle.

Both the Western Maryland railway and Baltimore and Ohio railway co-operated to the best of their ability. Railroads are not required to participate in the test blackouts except under blackout regulations from the Office of Defense Transportation. The stations were darkened and lights in the yards were purely directional or signal.

The yellow signal came to the local control center at 8:37 p. m., followed by the blue at 8:50 p. m., and the red at 9 p. m. The white of all-clear signal was sounded at 9:31 p. m.

According to Associated Press dispatches, Baltimore held a test blackout of fifteen minutes, the air raid sirens sounding at 9 p. m., and the all-clear at 9:15 p. m. Like Allegheny, Carroll county blackout out for thirty-one minutes. No explanation was given for the extended alerts.

More Alerts Scheduled

Daylight alerts now can be expected at any time, according to Col. Barrett. The first of a series in Maryland was held November 6.

Gigantic Enemy

on the seas. The Solomons battle, while not of course giving the United States dominance in the whole Pacific area, appeared likely to hasten the day when that goal will be attained.

Famous Officer Killed

Even the death of Rear Admiral Daniel J. Callaghan, beloved "Uncle Dan" to many a navy man and former naval aide to President Roosevelt, in the furious, close-range night engagement which opened the three-day battle in the early morning of November 13 could not dampen the elation with which naval officers announced the victory.

In a lengthy communique, the navy described the various actions in which the American forces had sunk a Japanese battleship, three heavy cruisers, two light cruisers, five destroyers and eight transports, destroyed the four beached cargo transports, and damaged a battleship and six destroyers.

Japanese Plans Known

Preparations for a major attempt by the Japanese to recapture the southeastern Solomons became evident early this month, the navy reported, when aerial reconnaissance revealed a heavy concentration of transports and warships of the enemy fleet in New Britain and the Northwestern Solomons.

The huge expedition got under way the morning of November 10, with Japanese naval forces approaching Guadalcanal from the north, while other detachments, including large numbers of transports, moved southeastward toward the American positions from Rabaul and Buin where the enemy had been assembling its expeditionary forces.

Help from MacArthur

The navy credited the army bombers of General Douglas MacArthur's command with supplying "great assistance" in the early phase of the looming fight, by making repeated successful attacks on the invasion fleet at Rabaul and Buin, as reported in communique from Australia. MacArthur's aircraft also gave valuable aid after the naval actions developed.

The Japanese expedition moved toward Guadalcanal behind a warship spearhead of two battleships, two heavy cruisers, four light cruisers and about ten destroyers, which reached the American-held island shortly after midnight November 12.

It was their intention, said the communique, to bombard navy-marine forces ashore in preparation for a large scale landing from the following transports. The battle units moved to the attack in three groups.

Enemy Plans Balked

However, instead of the easy conquest they expected, they ran into units of the United States fleet, which engaged them at close range in the darkness, not only landing telling blows on the Nipponese warships but creating such confusion in the enemy fleet that before the fight was over two of the three Japanese groups were firing at each other. Instead of escorting their waiting soldiers ashore, they ceased firing and, in the restrained language of the communique, "retired to the northward."

Attack 12 Transports

Later during the day of November 13, American planes kept up a continual running attack on the damaged enemy ships still trying to limp away from the scene of the fighting, and in the afternoon the planes discovered twelve transports under heavy naval escort headed for Guadalcanal from the vicinity of Bougainville island, 260 miles to the northeast.

The warships moved up that night and bombarded the American positions on Guadalcanal, but before the transports could move up the morning of November 14 they were caught offshore by aircraft, and eight of them were sunk, leaving four—probably those found later at Tassafaronga—proceeding toward the island.

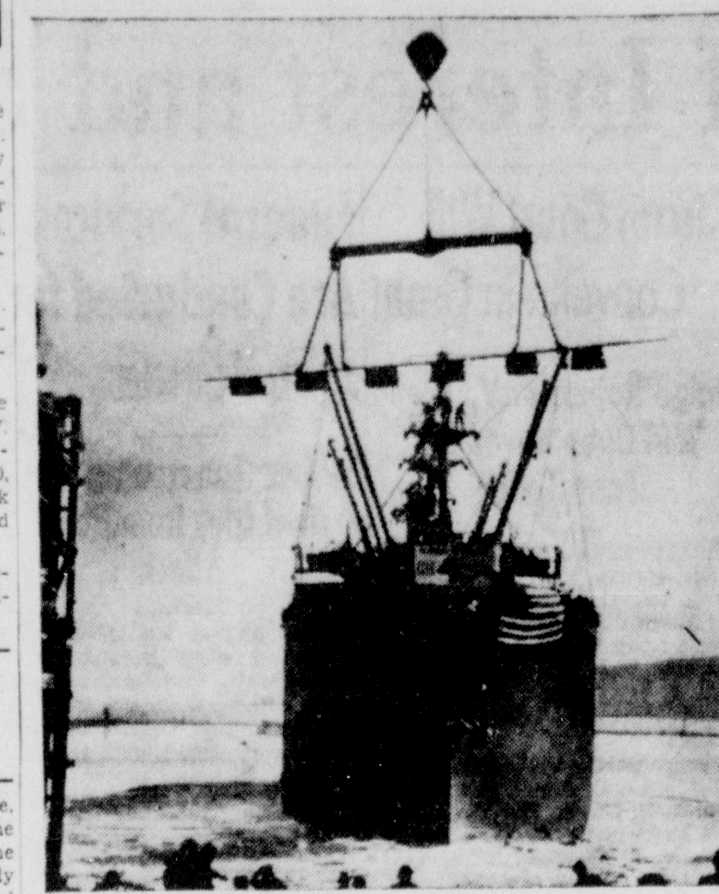

Enemy warships in the Guadalcanal area were engaged again by the American fleet the night of November 14-15. Detailed reports on this fight have not been received in Washington, but the next morning the remnants of the battered Japanese force were found withdrawing to the north, and no reports of any further action have come through.

Pacific Score to Date

The punishment dealt out to the Japanese fleet in this battle brought the enemy's losses in the Solomons to date, as reported by navy communique, to thirty-five ships sunk, five probably sunk and seventy-one damaged, or one hundred and eleven vessels of all types sunk and damaged.

Against this, the United States has reported the loss of twenty-four ships sunk, including two aircraft

The vessel was launched exactly four days and fifteen and one-half hours after the keel was laid. The keel for the next ship to be built in the same dock can be seen as it is lowered over the bow of the Peary. This is a phonephoto.

Carriers and Three Cruisers, and at Least Five Damaged

In addition, the Australian cruiser Canberra was sunk while operating as part of the naval force covering the initial American landings in the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area in August.

In detailing the composition of the enemy armada smashed in the recent action, the communique significantly mentioned no aircraft carriers—the first time since the Pacific war started that their presence has not been noted in a major engagement. The Japs had lost six of the eight with which they entered the war before the latest fighting opened and may be having serious difficulty in replacing them in view of their limited industrial capacity.

Battle Decisive

The battle was a decisive one by the enemy's own admission—but in the opposite way from which Tokyo apparently meant it. The Berlin radio yesterday quoted the newspaper Asahi Shimbun as saying that "it would decisively influence the whole war situation."

Perhaps to pave the way for acknowledgement of some of the painful results of the latest Solomons fighting, the Japanese high command issued today an exaggerated account of the Solomons action of Oct. 26, claiming to have sunk three aircraft carriers including the Enterprise and Hornet, one battleship, three cruisers and a destroyer and to have damaged six other American warships.

Meanwhile U. S. and British ground forces were reported pushing into Tunisia, although a spokesman said radio reports of fighting in the Bizerte area were premature.

American soldiers rounded up 250 German and Italian members of an Axis Armistice Commission at Oran, Algiers, and Casablanca.

The fact that so many members of Axis missions in North Africa were captured was regarded as evidence that Hitler and Mussolini were caught completely unaware of the American and British operation.

The vast expedition was called the "biggest tactical surprise of the war" by military sources.

Nazis Completely Surprised

Despite the number of men involved, the great quantities of shipping collected at different harbors, and the fact that thousands of railroad and transport workers knew something was afoot, the vaunted German intelligence service had no inkling of preparations for the occupation.

It is believed that the Germans first became aware of extraordinary developments when convoys started streaming through the strait of Gibraltar the day before the attack. This is borne out by the fact that only one ship was damaged before the hour of attack, and it was not until two days later that the Axis air and sea attacks began to gather strength.

Field reports showed that some large bodies of troops had been ashore one to two hours before they were discovered.

The work of "unblocking and improving harbors" in Morocco on the Atlantic coast "is progressing satisfactorily," the communique said, and "General Nogues, French commander and governor of Morocco, is co-operating effectively and enthusiastically."

Crippled Boy Wins Scrap Championship

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 16 (AP)—An 11-year-old boy who until the last year could not engage in outdoor activities because of physical handicaps won the state scrap collection championship.

He is James Hargis, who is partially blind and has a weak heart. His collection—4,000 pounds, gathered after school hours with a wagon—brought him a $150 war bond.

The constant piling up of inventories in manufacture suggests that scarcity of some materials for war goods is due largely to a maladministration, according to the department of Commerce.

The navy has established a large training base at high, scenic Lake Pend Oreille in the Idaho mountains.

Penny the Pup Heads For Movie Stardom

Brenda Joyce is boasting these days about the potential movie star in her family. The star goes by the name of Penny, and is a Shetland shepherd pup.

Penny is the son of Tubby, who gave an Academy Award performance in "On the Sunny Side." Brenda, who was instrumental in getting the job for Tubby, received Penny as a present from trainer Bud Russell. Russell is also training Penny for the films, and expects in a few months that the Shetland will take his place with Rin-Tin-Tin, Strongheart and Asta in the canine Hall of Fame.

Brenda, who will be seen in Twentieth Century-Fox's "Whispering Ghosts" tomorrow at the Strand theater, was given a beautiful present for her dog after completion of the picture. An expensive dog-collar studded with brightly colored glass and metal plays a big part in the mystery-comedy, and when the picture was finished, Director Alfred Werker made her a present of it for Penny.

"Sweater Girl," Paramount's lively mystery musical film of campus life, with Eddie Bracken, June Preisser, Betty Jane Rhodes, Phillip Terry and Nils Asther in the leading roles, is the first picture in years to use none but 'teen-age collegians. The film also starts tomorrow at the Strand theater.

Cecilia Parker Working On New "Hardy" Picture

Cecilia Parker, young Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, appearing in person at the Maryland theater for the last times today, returns after her engagement to complete the last in the Hardy family picture series titled "Andy Hardy Steps Out." Miss Parker has been touring the East to personally meet her many picture fans. Appearing in company with Cecilia is Dick Baldwin, star of RKO Dr. Christian pictures and Texas Jim Lewis and his Lone Star Cowboys, America's No. 1 hill-billy comedian. Starting tomorrow on the Maryland screen, Fredric March and Veronica Lake in "I Married a Witch" with Susan Hayward and Robert Benchley.

Rex Beach Drama Has Marlene Dietrich

Showing today at the Garden theater is Rex Beach's most popular drama, "The Spoilers," a story of Alaska. A saga of adventure on the gold frontier, the picture stars Marlene Dietrich, Randolph Scott and John Wayne. Margaret Lindsay, Harry Carey, Richard Barthelmess, William Farnum and George Cleveland are included in the cast.

Snyder Favored To Win City Scoring Crown

Allegany High's Fullback Passes Martin in Chase

Campers, Sentinels Wage Close Race for Total Offense Honors

Allegany's Don Snyder, shooting for his second straight city scholastic football scoring championship as well as the all-time record of 114 points held by Derl Keller of Penn Avenue high's 1935 outfit, again took over the pacesetter's berth last week when he upped his total number of points to 101.

Snyder, who gathered seventeen markers as Allegany blasted Martinsburg 41-0 to remain unbeaten and untied, holds a seven-point advantage over Port Hill's Robert "Skinny" Martin, who accounted for the Sentinels' only touchdown as the Hilltoppers and Hagerstown figured in a 6-6 deadlock for the first blotch on the Fort Hill season record.

Pile of Snyder's points against the Bulldogs were the result of successful boots for extra markers and now the Allegany fullback has a total of twenty-three conversions and thirteen touchdowns in seven games.

Martin leads in touchdowns with fifteen but has appeared in one more game than Snyder. The only remaining chance Martin has of boosting his total will come on Thanksgiving day when Allegany and Port Hill collide in their annual classic. On the other hand, Snyder, who is a top-heavy favorite to walk off with top honors again and who has at least a fifty-fifty chance of bettering the all-time record, will have two opportunities—against Hagerstown here Saturday and Port Hill.

Kellough Takes Third
Charles "Chick" Kellough of Allegany took over the show position with forty-eight points. He previously had been tied with Port Hill's Warren "Chesty" Squires, but tallied a touchdown last week while Squires went scoreless. Squires is now fourth with forty-two points.

Jack Smith, Allegany back, jumped from thirteenth to a tie for eighth with Don Beck, also of the West Siders, by collecting two touchdowns in the Martinsburg battle. Each has twenty-four points for seven games.

Fred Davis and Kenny Bridges of Port Hill are still running fifth and sixth with Davis sporting thirty-three points and Bridges thirty. Joe Monteleone of Port Hill and Carl "Bus" Hammernsmith, Allegany end, are knotted for ninth with twenty points. Hammernsmith ran fifty-seven yards on an end-round play to score against the Bulldogs and the Monteleone.

In the other changes, Captain Ronald Palmer and Jim Laffey of LaSalle moved into a five-way tie for eleventh with Jim Jones and Henry Natale, also of LaSalle. The four explorers each have eighteen points but are forced to share the spot with Don Whiteman of Port Hill.

Team Offense Records
Allegany and Port Hill are running a neck-and-neck race for total offense honors with the Sentinels, despite their tie with Hagerstown, piling up more yardage than the West Siders did in routing Martinsburg.

In seven games, Allegany has averaged 332 yards per contest while in eight starts, Port Hill has averaged 331.3. In points scored, the Blue and White, with 267, is averaging 38.1 a game while Port Hill, with 269, is averaging 33.6.

The Campers have made eighty-two first downs, an average of 11.7 to Port Hill's eighty-five, an average of 10.6. The Sentinels hold a wide margin in yards by rushing with 2,325 to Allegany's 1,748 but Coach Herman Hall's "T" minded West Siders continue to hold the edge in passing with 575 yards on forty-one of eighty-one tosses. Port Hill has gained 325 yards by connecting twenty-four of forty-six heaves. Allegany's total yardage is 2,323, while Port Hill's is 2,651.

LaSalle, which completed its season last Friday by defeating Keyser, made fifty first downs, 961 yards by rushing, completed sixteen of forty-eight passes for 264 yards and gained a total of 1,225 yards in seven contests.

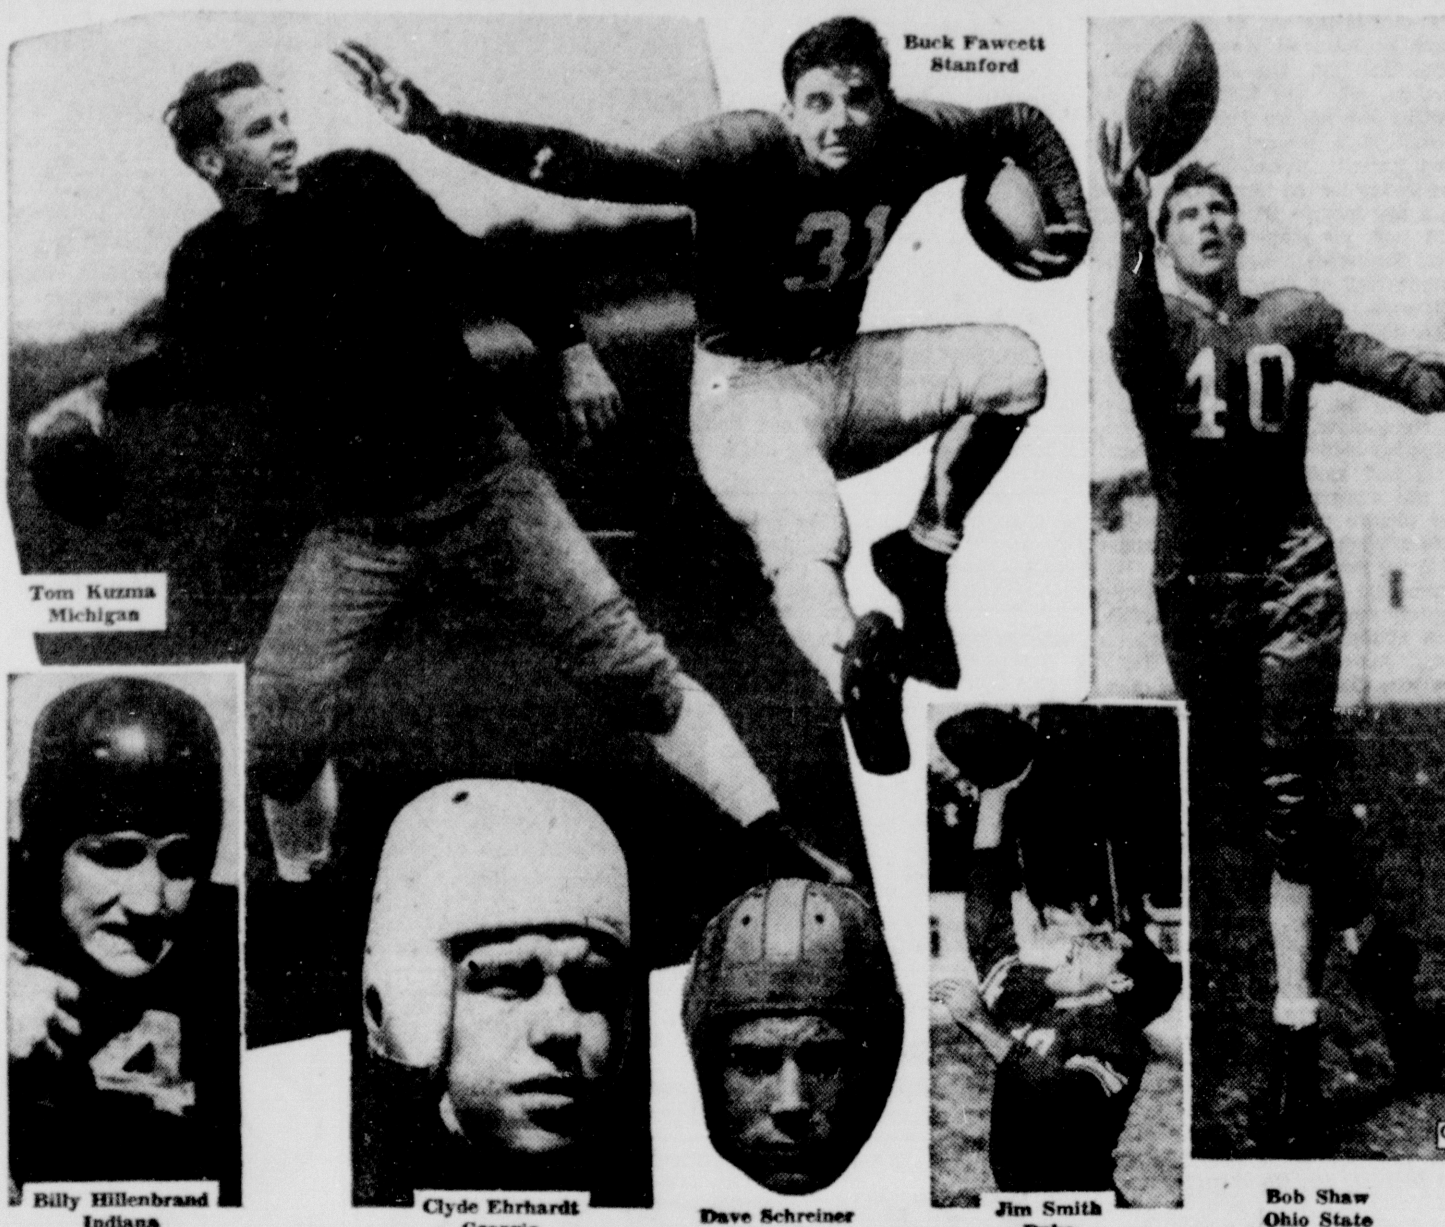

Sentinels Defense Shines
Port Hill's defense has limited opponents to an average of only eighty-seven yards a game while Allegany's foes have averaged 101.5 yards. The Sentinels had their goal crossed for the first time at Hagerstown while the West Siders allowed Handley's Judges six points and LaSalle twelve.

Allegany has yielded twenty-four first downs, an average of 3.4, 419 yards by rushing, 292 yards on twenty completed passes out of sixty-nine attempts and a total of 711 yards.

Port Hill has allowed thirty-five first downs, an average of 4.3, 384 yards by rushing, an average of forty-eight, 312 yards on twenty-five of seventy-nine passes and a total of 896 yards.

LaSalle's rivals had a fifty-two to fifty edge in first downs, gained 1,020 yards overland to the Explorers' 961, picked up 190 yards by completing eighteen of fifty-seven tosses and gained a total of 1,210 yards to the Blue and Gold's 1,225

TOUGH CONFERENCE GAMES HEADLINE NOV. 21 FOOTBALL PROGRAM

Important conference games between Michigan and Ohio State, Wisconsin and Minnesota, U. C. L. A. and Washington, Duke and North Carolina State and Georgia and Auburn headline the football card for Saturday, Nov. 21. Other games of interest on the schedule include Michigan State-West Virginia, Yale-Harvard, Notre Dame-Northwestern, California-Stanford, Fordham-Missouri, and the "Old Oaken Bucket" clash between Purdue and Indiana, the historic Hoosier rivals.

John Lardner Says Maybe Joe Cronin Was Reason Red Sox Finished Second

By JOHN LARDNER

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The Boston Red Sox were the most debatable team of the last baseball season. There was the question of whether they should have won the pennant in the American League. There was the question of whether Ted Williams should have been voted the game's most valuable player of the year. And there was the shortstop, John Pesky—who was the year's outstanding rookie?

In short, the Sox were the most interesting club in their league. For a long time, there has been nothing very interesting about the team that beat them, except to students in business schools. The Bostonians, because they finished second and might have finished first, possess a certain amount of juice.

Baseball Heresy
I realize it is baseball heresy to say that the American League pennant did not go to the best team in the league. It is customary to rank the Yankees with the Chicago Bears, in terms of relativity. I will ask you to ignore what is customary, friends. The Yankees were no more the Bears than the Philadelphia Athletics were the Green Bay Packers.

Your correspondent, being a freeborn soul, does not have to second-guess managers. On the other hand, he does not have to support managers who have public charm, simply because they have public charm.

From four sources closely connected with the Red Sox, and from another source connected with another team, who would yell like a burglar if his name were mentioned, I have heard the opinion that the Yankees were not the best team in the American League this past season. These same sources expressed the opinion that the Red Sox were the best team.

My own opinion, worth two cents in the open market, is the same. It is high time that the wraps were taken off a slightly complicated and misleading situation.

The high executives of the Red Sox thought they had a pennant-winner going into the 1942 season. On paper, they were right. On the field, they were also right. As it happened, they finished second.

Cronin Nice Guy
This may or may not have been the manager's fault. The manager, Joe Cronin, is one of the nicest guys in his relations with the press that you would care to know. He was also a great ball player while he had it, and the press and public esteem him for that. The press, if not the public, is inclined to accept a pleasant, intelligent, clear-spoken man as a great manager, and if his team fails to win, we look elsewhere for the cause.

So maybe we miss the cause. Mr. Cronin has consistently been at odds with good players on his ball club. More often than not, he has sold them or traded them away when they were unable to see eye to eye with him—and a great many have not seen eye to eye with him, no matter how mild their characters were. When a player was too good to be sold or traded away, too outstanding to be discarded, Mr. Cronin has kept him; and kept him down.

Williams, the greatest natural hitter of the last ten years, if not a completely solemn and regimented character, lost the award for more valuable because the galleries sometimes booed him. The galleries took their cue from Mr. Cronin, who fired, suspended, and belittled Williams at every possible opportunity. Mind you, I do not say I could have handled Williams any better. But there are few other managers in the business who knock their stars to the press. Instead of knocking, they use what tact they have and try to improve the situation quietly.

Williams was always gathering from Mr. Cronin's remarks to the press, that DiMaggio was a better player than he was. Bobby Doerr has heard the same thing about Joe Gordon, from his manager, for a number of seasons. Maybe Mr. Cronin is technically correct. I merely ask, if you were managing a team of players with a chance to win, is that the way you would talk?

Mr. Cronin has had plenty of stars. He does not seem to care for them, and, in time, they do not seem to care for him. He is a lovely fellow off the ball field, but his players do not get the benefit of this vicarious loveliness.

P. S.—Pesky is quite a shortstop. —North American Newspaper.

Ali Ghan Gun Club Plans Thanksgiving Shoot Next Tuesday

The Cumberland Ali Ghan Gun Club will hold its annual Thanksgiving turkey shoot at its traps at the Shrine country club, Baltimore pike, next Tuesday, November 24.

Thirty turkeys will be offered as prizes in the Lewis class shoot with one bird going to each class of five shooters. The vent will get under way at 10 a. m.

There will be both trap and skeet shooting and shells will be available on the grounds. It will probably be the club's final shoot for the duration of the war.

Movies Show Navy's Win over Columbia Wasn't Any "Gift"
ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 16 (AP)—Any thoughts Navy players might have had that last Saturday's 13-9 victory over Columbia was a "gift" were dispelled today when they saw the movies of the game.

After Hal Hamberg passed to End Al Channell and the ball bounced skyward to eventually land in Pullback Hills Hume's arms and be carried for a touchdown, sports writers covering the game were divided about the play's legality; some arguing no Columbia player had touched the ball after Channell muffed it, others that it had been touched and was a legal play.

But the movies show that Half-back Bruce Gehrke of Columbia struck at the ball, deflecting its line of flight and sending it high above his head to Hume who had raced beyond him.

Outdoorsman Offers Squirrel Hunters Tip

LINDEN, Tenn., Nov. 16.—A Perry county outdoorsman has developed a unique and successful technique for hunting squirrels.

Watt Rainey, hunting and fishing guide, dons thin trousers that won't rattle when branches strike them, and wears light tennis shoes. When he hears squirrels feeding, Rainey takes ten or twelve steps and then jumps on the ground to produce a thudding sound with both feet.

After remaining quiet for a few seconds, he moves his foot in a semi-circle in the leaves, creating rattling noises. Then quiet again. Rainey explains that the combination of thumps and rattling of the leaves "just gets the animals—from plain curiosity."

The squirrels come out of hiding and Rainey picks them off, with his rifle. He bagged five that way on his last hunt.

Incidentally, he advises hunters never to take to the woods for squirrels before mid-afternoon.

And squirrel skinning? Rainey holds the Tennessee record in this department, having skinned thirty-three squirrels once in thirty minutes.

Notre Dame Grows 'Em Tall

One of the biggest, heaviest, soldiers at Fort Sheridan in Illinois is Private William Ford, six feet, six inches tall and 320 pounds in weight. He played football several years ago at Notre Dame.

Thirty turkeys will be offered as prizes in the Lewis class shoot with one bird going to each class of five shooters. The vent will get under way at 10 a. m.

There will be both trap and skeet shooting and shells will be available on the grounds. It will probably be the club's final shoot for the duration of the war.

Aggies' Ace Pass Taker Is Slick In Name, Deeds

Cullen "Slick" Rogers Caught 27 Tosses Up to November 7

COLLEGE STATION, Tex., Nov. 15. (Wide World)—Cullen (Slick) Rogers, Texas A. and M.'s quarterback, is the nation's top pass-receiver but that's just part of his job as he sparks the Cadets down the stretch of the Southwest Conference football race.

Rogers' work has been largely responsible for the Aggies' about-face from early-season losses to make them probably the most feared team along November's championship trail—not a championship for A. and M., because the Cadets have dropped two conference games, but for the Rice, tied last week, and Texas, the last two games on the Aggies' schedule.

The popular Rogers is some shakes of a ball-carrier, having toted the leather for 104 yards on thirty carries, in addition to the masterminding on all Aggie plays.

Has Caught 27 Passes
Through Nov. 7, and including the game with Southern Methodist, the Aggie field general had caught twenty-seven passes for 340 yards and five touchdowns, thus rating a spot among the leading conference scorers.

In fact, it must be a pass play or Rogers won't make a touchdown it seems. He has scored six all together and the other one came on an interception of a pass thrown by Meredith Jones of Arkansas. That one he took on his own one-yard line and went the ninety-nine yards to a touchdown.

Few of his pass receptions for scores have been spectacular so far as distance is concerned, but on many catches he has had to grab the ball while fighting off as many as three defenders.

The longest was a toss from Leo Daniels for forty-one yards. It also has been Daniels who has hit him with the majority of the twenty-seven he has taken. Three of Leo's pitches made touchdowns and Barney Welch threw him two for scores.

Rogers is an unassuming young man who pays little attention to praise. He is well liked by his mates, who elected him to be student representative on the A. and M. athletic council. That job was held by his older brother, Owen (Slick I) Rogers, in 1937.

He'll Fight for Army In and Out of Ring

CAMP EDWARDS, Mass., Nov. 16 (AP)—Private Don Eddy of Niagara Falls, N. Y., is still a rookie, and has not yet appeared in the fight ring here, but he is considered an outstanding candidate for the camp boxing team.

Camp boxing coaches feel that any man who has had seven years' experience as a professional boxer and fought two former lightweight champs is solid material for any boxing team.

Pvt. Eddy was a Golden Glove champ in 1935. Since turning professional he won and lost ten round decisions with Lew Jenkins, former lightweight champ, and lost a ten round decision to Sammy Angott, former NBA lightweight champ.

Interstate Loop Plans To Expand

Breaking Up of Other Minor Leagues Expected To Aid Circuit

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 16 (AP)—The Interstate Baseball League voted today to continue operating next season and planned to increase the membership from six to eight clubs.

President Arthur H. Ehlers of Baltimore said the breaking up of other minor leagues might enable the Interstate circuit to add clubs, especially if major league sponsors could be found. He mentioned York and Reading, Pa., and Salisbury, Md., as possible additions.

Five of the six members—Lancaster, Harrisburg and Allentown, Pa., Wilmington, Del., and Hagerstown, Md.—were present. Ehlers represented Trenton, N. J.

Trenton was chosen as the site of the annual meeting to be held the second Monday in February. An attempt to eliminate weekend travel to conform with war transportation demands will be made in making the schedule at that session. Lengthening inter-club series to four and three games was mentioned as one means to accomplish this.

Ehlers, who was named to represent the league at the minor leagues meeting at Chicago next month, said the circuit's attendance was 501,716 for the 1942 season, an increase of more than 50,000 from the 1941 campaign when eight teams were in the league.

Orange Bowl May Have Grid Treat With Few Chips

Sponsors Play Cards Close to Vest in Annual Poker Session

By JOHN WILDS

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 16 (AP)—They've got the shortest stack of chips in the annual bowl poker session, but Orange Bowl sponsors are playing their cards close to the vest and hope to come out with another colorful New Year's day football game.

When the stakes are unbeaten championship teams, promoters here can't match the ante of their richer rivals—the Rose and Sugar bowls.

But by pressing their luck in the round of bluff and maneuver they always precedes the showdown for the Jan. 1 games, the Orange Bowl's usually have managed to bring home a gridiron treat.

They hit the jackpot last New Year's day, for instance, when Frankie Sinkwich put on one of the most brilliant individual performances in bowl history to give Georgia a 40 to 26 victory over Texas Christian.

For the 1939 game, the Orange Bowl came up with an ace in the hole and had the only meeting of undefeated eleven, Tennessee and Oklahoma.

Eyes to the Southwest
With the high-scoring 1942 show fresh in mind, commitments have their eyes turned again this year toward the southwest.

"We were well pleased with that exhibition," said President Oscar E. Dooly, Jr., "and while we have made no decision yet, and leading teams from all parts of the country are under consideration, we are watching the Southwest."

Unbeaten Tulsa is a distinct possibility, and the team which comes out on top of the scrambled Southwestern Conference heap—possibly Texas or Texas Christian—will come in for much discussion.

Rickey, Durocher To Confer Today On Managership

New President of Dodgers Hopes for Speedy Decision

By JUDSON BAILEY
NEW YORK, Nov. 16 (AP)—Branch Rickey and Leo Durocher will come to conversational grips tomorrow on the question of who will manage the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1943 and the recently appointed president of the club said today he hoped for an early decision.

"This uncertainty is not my way of doing things," declared Rickey. "I want to settle this matter at the earliest possible moment and then I will be able to attack my other problems with more energy and daylight."

As to whether the matter is settled tomorrow, Rickey can only say if it is settled it will be settled and if it's not settled it will be unsettled.

"That is a silly statement. But it means that if I don't settle with Durocher then the whole matter will be very unsettled and may take some little time, perhaps weeks, to settle."

The Army Question
Rickey said that "for very good reasons" he could not disclose what matters he and Durocher would have to agree upon to bring about the return of "The Lip" for his fifth season at the helm of the Dodgers, but added that "right now the question of Durocher's entering the army at some time in the future is figuring less in my consideration of the problem than it did before. It may have a more prominent place in my judgment on the job later, but at the present time it is not the most important factor we have to consider."

Shaughnessy Plans To Revamp Attack for Saturday's Game

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Nov. 16 (AP)—Despite a 27-12 victory over the University of Virginia at Charlottesville last Saturday, the University of Maryland got no Monday respite today as preparations for the Washington and Lee game were started.

Coach Clark Shaughnessy, who wouldn't relish being an upset victim with the old grads present for homecoming day, made it clear that despite the victory over the Cavaliers there were too many flaws in the Maryland play to take time off.

Shaughnessy revamped his entire attack for the Virginia game in just three days and plans to do the same for the Generals.

Scout Al Heagy of the Old Liners said the hefty Generals appeared to have all the potentialities for a strong eleven and played like they were arriving in the 21-13 loss to Davidson at Charlotte, N.C.

Maryland suffered no injuries of note in the Virginia game.

Marquette Center Has Perfect Mark

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 16—Center Mel Maceau of the Marquette university football team is doing a week-high perfect job as snapperback on the Golden Avalanche this fall.

He hasn't made a bad pass all year and that record includes seventy-five perfect backward tosses with an extremely muddy ball during the recent victory over Detroit U.

voted him a share in the captaincy for next season. Rogers plays left field and is a star there as well as being a heavy hitter. He was all-conference last year.

As a freshman, he won numerals in football, basketball and baseball, and has earned varsity letters twice each in football and baseball, having passed up the cage game, since his freshman year.

He has had a turn at captaining the football team this season, having been appointed by Coach Homer Norton. After the season is over, the letterman will elect an honorary captain and Cullen may tie his older brother there, too, for Slick I was captain of his senior team.

Rogers is a chunky 185-pounder and is 21 years of age. He hails from Mart, Texas.

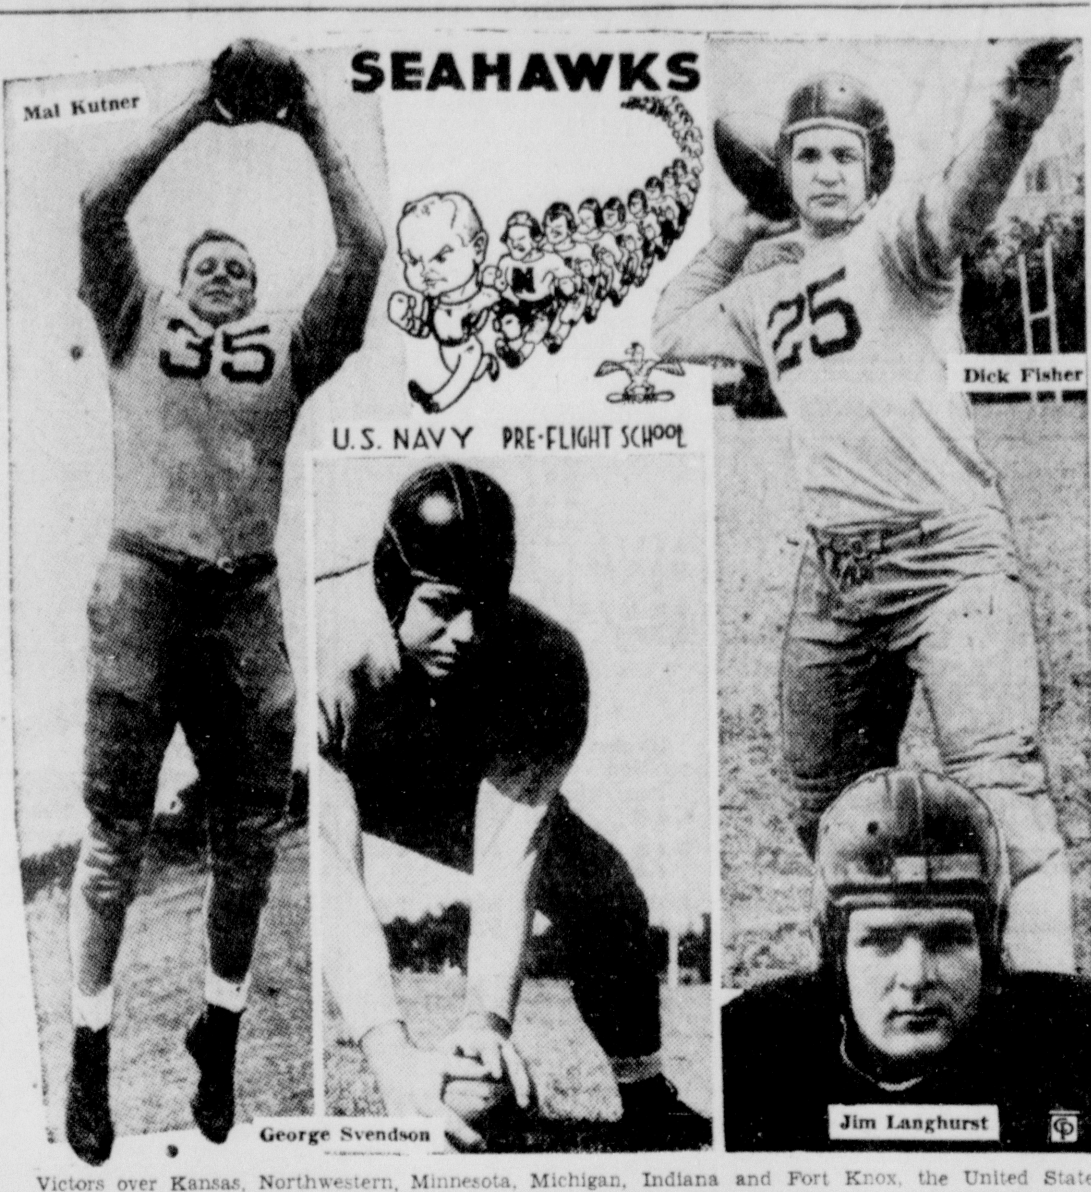

Last year, he was not a starter but wound up second in the Southwest Conference scoring race. He caught twenty-three passes for 400 yards and scored nine touchdowns—seven as the result of pass receptions.

LEAD IOWA SEAHAWKS TO SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Victors over Kansas, Northwestern, Minnesota, Michigan, Indiana and Port Knox, the United States Navy Pre-Flight School eleven, the Seahawks, of Iowa City, Ia., are enjoying a very successful season. Coached by Lieut. Col. Bernie Bierman, ex-Minnesota mentor, the Seahawks are led by two former Ohio State backs, Dick Fisher and Jim Langhurst; End Mal Kutner, ex-Texas All-American, and George Svendsen, end from Minnesota. Notre Dame is the only team which has beaten the Seahawks who still must play Nebraska, Ohio State, Missouri and the North Carolina Cats.

Good Grid Teams Make Mistakes But Can Recover

Georgia Tech Had Three Bobbles against 'Bama but Won 7-0

ATLANTA, Nov. 16 (AP)—The football team isn't made that won't make mistakes, and take it from Bobby Dodd, acting head coach of Georgia Tech, he'll judge a team's greatness by what it does with its bobbles.

Dodd says his unbeaten, untied Yellowjackets made three mistakes against Alabama Saturday, any of which might have changed the score—but Tech recovered the initiative and hurled back the Crimson Tide five times to win the game 7-0.

The mistakes:

1. Allowing a forward pass to be intercepted by 'Bama's great center, Joe Donnanovich, in the second period.

2. Suffering a lapse when 'Bama's Johnny August broke loose on a fake kick and ran forty-six yards to Tech's thirty earlier in the same quarter.

3. Weakening in the middle once for 'Bama's sophomore fullback Bobby Tom Jenkins, to gain fourteen yards in the third quarter.

It was Tech's freshman halfback, Clint Castleberry, who threw the intercepted pass. There was no fluster to the little guy, however. Moving swiftly with the play, he met Donnanovich on the fifteen and pulled him down with a clean tackle. Then Tech held.

August's run from punt formation set off a drive which carried to Tech's eight, first-down and goal-to-go. There 'Bama battered Tech's line four times for a net of one yard, and Tech took the ball on downs.

Jenkins' plunge started an advance which rolled clear to Tech's twenty-nine. There August uncoiled an apparent scoring pass to Ted Cook, but Castleberry's circus lunge on the goal-line batted it down, and Tech again held.

During Alexander's illness, Backfield Coach Bobby Dodd directed the undefeated and untied Engineers to important victories over Kentucky and Alabama on successive Saturdays.

As Tech tripped Alabama here last weekend, 7-0, Alexander remained indoors reading and did not learn of the triumph until after the game.

SEATTLE, Nov. 16—Stories about the big one that got away have become as familiar in the barracks and tents this fall as they are out at the rod and gun club.

When the Seattle Poggie Club committee closed its books on the season, it reported that 1,500 serious men had been taken on officially sponsored trips during the salmon runs and hundreds of others got a fling at the sport on private outings as sportsmen's guests.

Many of the men who never before had felt the thrill of landing a fighting fish were able to go back to their quarters with stories about the big one that didn't get away.

Old Professor Turns His Class Over to Coaches

Wolverine Offense and Line Wins Praise from Frank Leahy

By WHITEY MARTIN
NEW YORK, Nov. 16 (AP)—The Old Professor sat burled to his ears in a blanket and with his feet in a bucket of hot water. He turned watery eyes toward his Monday morning class of football coaches.

Old Professor—Egguse me, gentlemen. I'm trying to thaw out my blumbing which was frozen up Saturday at the Polo Grounds. I—eschew—shouldn't be in bed.

Bobby Dodd, Georgia Tech (subbing for Bill Alexander)—Me too, professor. Alex can move over now. I'm ready to share his bed after that game. I'm tickled to death. Our boys beat in Alabama, the toughest team I've met. Our backs were great, especially Castleberry and Plaster, but it was those fine boys in the line who stopped Alabama's hard-hitting backs.

Frank Thomas, Alabama—I've never been prouder of a team in winning than I was of my bunch of boys who lost to Tech. Tech has a fine team and it will take a great team to beat it.

Old Professor—I'm burning over the glass do you gentlemen today as I can't talk very well. Please broozed wild da disgussion.

Leahy's Eyes Opened
Frank Leahy, Notre Dame—Well, gentlemen, Saturday I saw the greatest football team Notre Dame has had the misfortune to encounter this year. And it was the greatest game of the year. I've never seen such offense. And that Wolverine line! It was pretty good on defense but on offense those guys went nuts.

Fritz Crisler, Michigan—I've been around a few years and thought I had something, but never in my life has there been so much action on a field before my eyes. Every minute was offense, offense, offense. No team has ever fought harder for me than those boys.

Maurice "Skip" Palrang, Creighton—Say, guys, if my team beats Tulsa next Saturday would you say we were the Sun bowl champs? We beat one of the 1942 Sun bowl teams—Texas Tech—Saturday. Our boys were on top of their game for the first time this year.

Del Morgan, Texas Tech—We were lousy Creighton went out to win and deserved to win, but I still think we played our poorest game of the year.

Denny Myers, Boston college—Don't blame me, fellows. It was my boys who really poured it out on Fordham. I tried to ease things in the third period but when the subs score on the first play, what can you do?

Earl Walsh, Fordham—Whew, Boston is one of the greatest clubs I've ever seen—and that's no alibi. Frank Kimbrough, Baylor—Meet the coach of the most generous team in existence, gentlemen—myself. We gave away two touchdowns on offense plays in the first half, and you can't expect to win doing that.

Iowa Passers Rushed
Eddie Anderson, Iowa—Speaking of passing, did you notice the swell job the Minnesota line did in rushing our passers? We used up an excellent game against Wisconsin last week, and I guess we couldn't come back.

George Hauser, Minnesota—Our reserves—Williams, Lauterbach, Luckemeyer and some others certainly handed us a pleasant surprise. Everything went right for us. Our guards played their best game of the year.

Ossie Cole, Syracuse—Speaking of right and wrong, everything Colgate did was right and everything we did was wrong.

Andy Kerr, Colgate—This Colgate team did what Colgate teams have done in the past—some back strong late in the season.

Eddie Cameron, Duke—Well, for once the sports writers were right. They called our game with North Carolina a tossup, and it was. Naturally we were disappointed as we expected to win. Billy Myers did some fine passing for North Carolina.

Jim Tatum, North Carolina—Both teams played fine ball, and our boys really fought back. Buddy Luper and Tom Davis were mighty hard to stop.

Old Professor—And so is cold. If you'll egguse me, gentlemen, I'll go look for a doctor now. Glass dismissed. Eschew.

I'M MECHANICALLY MINDED - I'VE GOT A SCREW LOOSE

FLASH GORDON—In the New World War

THANK YOU FOR FINDING THESE QUARTERS FOR ME, SERGEANT FIDOR. I GUESS FLASH IS TOO MUCH INTERESTED IN QUEEN TIGRA TO REMEMBER ME.

YOU MUSTN'T BELIEVE THAT, DALE. ALL THROUGH THE TOURNAMENT DUEL HE KEPT ASKING HOW YOU WERE BEING TREATED.

FIDOR, MY FRIEND! I'M LUCKY TO FIND YOU. TELL ME, WHERE IS DALE?

I GAVE HER MY HOUSE, FLASH. SAY, YOU HAD BETTER SEE HER - SHE'S WORRIED SICK ABOUT YOU AND THE QUEEN.

FLASH! WHAT ARE YOU DOING HERE?

QUICK, LET ME IN BEFORE SOMEONE SEES ME. I SLIPPED AWAY FROM THE PALACE - I HAD TO TELL YOU THAT I AM JUST TRYING TO PROTECT YOU FROM TIGRA.

STICK TO YOUR GUNS

CLOSE observation of countless cases by the leading players of the land has brought them into almost absolute agreement on one rather ticklish point. It concerns your action after deciding to open the bidding on a hand so close to the borderline that you could not very well be censured for passing. If your partner gives you a jump response, either to three in that same suit or to a stage one higher than a minimum in another suit, you are tempted to pass. Don't do it. In the long run, a pass will cost you more points than will bidding again.

No. 1 in the table above is the bidding that actually occurred, in a rubber game among four better-than-average players in Pittsburgh. East passed the 3-Hearts, which he probably would not do again in a similar spot. Calling 4-Hearts would have produced a game for his side, if not the slam which was in the cards.

Yes, he should have started with 1-Spade, as in No. 2, so he could have bid hearts cheaply on his next turn. But slam is hard to reach with East opening.

Practically every strong player would open in the West if East passed, due to his great playing strength. In that case, North would almost surely bid 2-Clubs, making it simple for West to cue-bid the suit and reach slam as in No. 3, by natural bidding, or by means of the Blackwood convention, as in No. 4, where the 4-No Trumps asks about all suits except the cue-bid clubs. That same bidding might also be used if North was silent.

Warrants Will Be Issued against Violators of Blackout Here

Eighth Test Is Described as "Worst Yet" as Ingram Promises Drastic Action To Get Proper Results

Violations galore were reported last evening by air raid wardens as Cumberland was caught napping by an unannounced test blackout of thirty-one minutes, the eighth to be observed here since December 26, 1941.

The test, a state-wide affair, was described as "the worst yet" by local civilian defense officials, and Vincent P. Ingram, civilian defense director for Allegany county, promised that warrants will be issued for violators within the next twenty-four hours as soon as all reports are received from wardens operating in the six city zones.

"This is the eighth blackout test for Cumberland and if the citizens are not educated by now they'll never learn," Ingram remarked.

Drastic Action Necessary
"The only means of forcing all citizens to comply with the regulations is to round up the violators and take them to court. Then and only then I can assure you that we'll get better co-operation in the future," Ingram added.

Chief offenders in last night's test were in the Cumberland business section, especially on North: Mechanic and North Centre streets, according to the slips filed at the local control center by air raid wardens. A store opposite the city hall was lit up like a Christmas tree throughout the blackout. In Zone No. 3, the business district, lights were detected burning brightly in eight stores and a gasoline service station. None of the establishments installed blackout switches in case of emergency, the warden learned upon investigation.

"If we continue to ignore these violations as we have in the past," Herman L. Myers, assistant to the chief air raid warden announced, "we just might as well wreck the entire civilian defense set-up."

"Air raid wardens and auxiliary police have reached the point of exasperation and the sooner the violators are tried in court the better the co-operation will be in the future."

Ingram pointed out that all citizens should know by now that when they leave their homes or places of business lights should be extinguished. If lights are required, blackout switches should be installed and the wardens will do the rest, he added.

"But this is an old story and I'm sorry we are forced to take drastic action by prosecuting violators according to provisions of a city blackout ordinance which was passed by the mayor and city council in July," Ingram declared.

Ridgely Blacks Out

Last evening's test was unlike that of November 10 when Allegany county and Cumberland cooperated in the West Virginia blackout.

Cadillac Lounge Will Open Today

Oval Bar Is Installed and Many Improvements Are Made

Cumberland's newest cocktail lounge, The Cadillac, will open for business today at 26 Baltimore street after extensive redecoration and remodeling which include an oval bar with places for fifty customers. The lounge will be under the management of Samuel F. DeLuca, Joseph R. Harrison, proprietor, announced recently.

Against a decorative scheme predominated by soft tones of aqua marine relieved by seating arrangements upholstered in gold along its walls, the Cadillac lounge carries through in all its appointments an excellence that sustains the management's claim for it as being "Maryland's most beautiful" cocktail resort.

The Cadillac's management claims for its thermostatically controlled beer cooling system the only one of its kind in the State of Maryland, a system that deposits a beaker of beer before the customer at the same degree of coolness imparted to it before leaving the brewery.

Details of appointments include three-toned tile flooring broken at the entrance to the lounge for a pattern of the Cadillac coat of arms; beam lights of variegated hue commingling to sustain an aqua marine mantle of color; a semi-circular band stand where Peck Mills and his band, with Russell Minnick as soloist, will perform as a permanent feature of Cadillac entertainment, supplemented with regularly rotated imported talent; and a hat check room for customer accommodation.

The lounge's oval bar, illuminated from a system of concealed lights, will be tended by a staff of four, Raymond Kyllus, John Allen, Anthony Molinari and Edward Farrell.

Physicians of Three Counties Will Meet Thursday in Hagerstown

Physicians representing Frederick, Washington and Allegany counties will meet in Hotel Alexander, Hagerstown, Thursday at 6 p. m., for the purpose of completing the formation of a mobile hospital unit for war time emergency service.

Dr. Frank M. Wilson, of Cumberland, will represent Allegany county; Dr. Edward P. Thomas, Frederick county, and Dr. W. D. Campbell, of Hagerstown, Washington county.

Plans for the organization of the unit, affiliated with the civilian defense program, were discussed last week at the initial meeting in Hagerstown.

Dr. Wilson said that the unit will function whenever a local community is unable to cope with the situation in case of an explosion, bombing or other disaster. The unit will co-operate in the counties of Allegany, Washington and Frederick for the duration of the war.

City Loses Case Over Erection Of Sign Boards

Court Ruling Gives Company Right To Pursue Its Business Here

A court injunction has been issued against the mayor and city council in favor of the Criterion Advertising Company, which seeks to erect a number of advertising boards in various parts of the city.

Sometime ago the company sought court aid in pursuing its business when the mayor and city council on October 6, ordered revocation of permits previously granted to the company by Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer. The permits were revoked by city officials after a number of civic organizations protested the erection of the sign boards.

In the court's opinion, which bears the signature of Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan, several similar cases are cited. It is also stated that the city ordinance which attempts to "license, tax and regulate, restrain and prohibit the erection or maintenance of signs, bills and posters" applies to bill boards containing more than twenty-five square feet. In this particular case, the boards in question contain only twenty-four square feet, and no permits are necessary, the court ruled. Therefore, it was explained the issuance of the permits was not necessary in the first place and the fact that they were revoked does not prevent the company from erecting its boards.

COUNCIL DECIDES GARBAGE CANS MUST BE TREATED GENTLY

The periodic question of garbage cans and garbage men and their semi-weekly clatter and clang was discussed again at the meeting of the mayor and city council yesterday.

This question, one that has come up many times in past months and years has usually wound up in a battle of wits to see who could make the cleverest remark or tell the most humorous story, but yesterday the situation was termed serious because garbage cans are becoming "hard to get," due to the war.

After one commissioner stated that there have been numerous complaints about garbage collectors bending and damaging cans and that they are becoming "worth their weight in gold," it was agreed that some definite action should be taken.

Dr. Theodore R. Shrop, city health officer was authorized to discuss the problem with the garbage collection contractor and determine if his employees, the garbage men, can be instructed to treat the cans more gently.

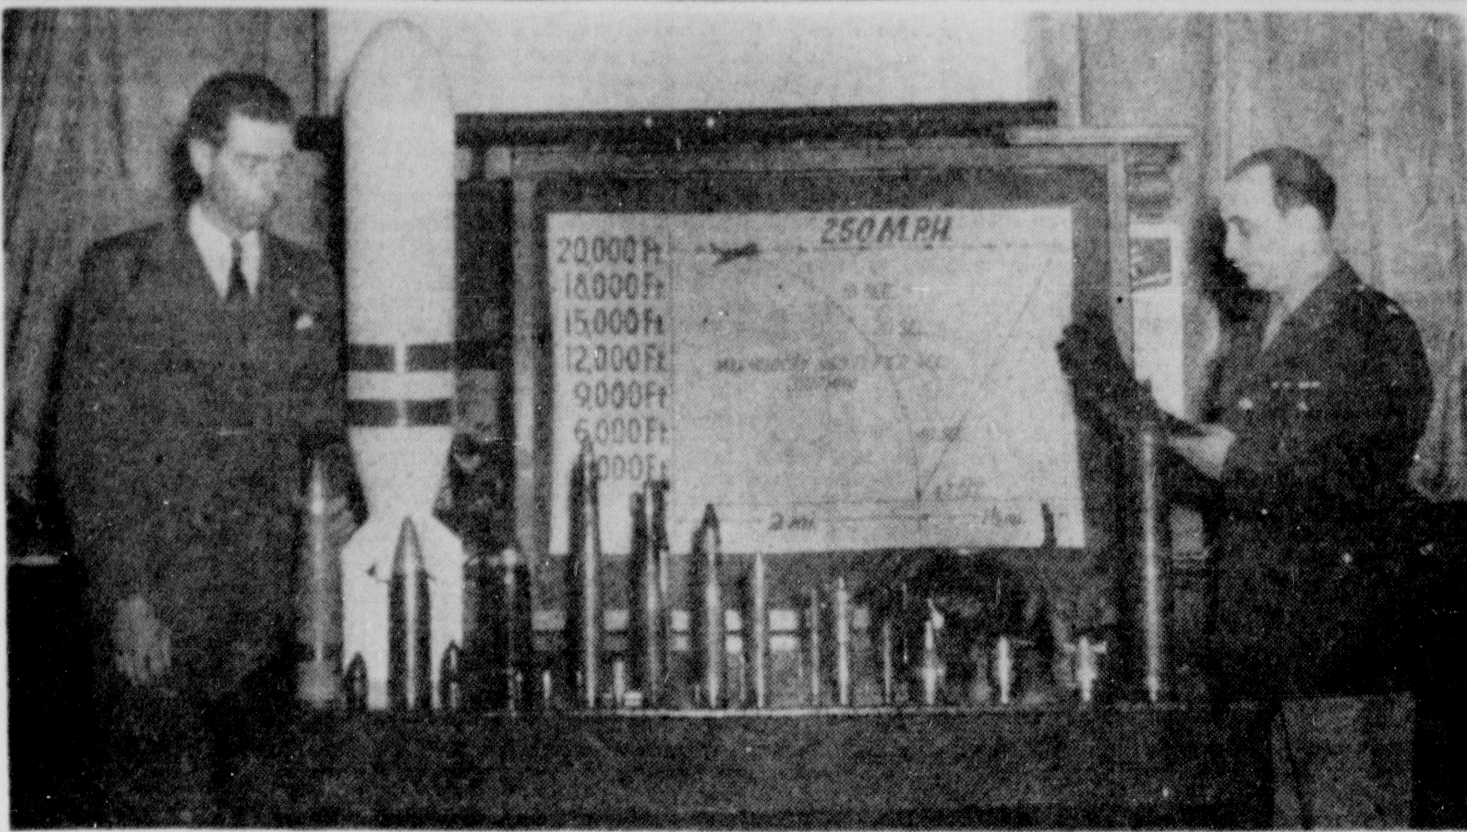

To those who have here-to-fore complained about the noise made by garbage collectors, any result from this final action on the part of city officials will probably be welcome, one observer stated.

Evangelist Will Speak at Rotary Club Meeting

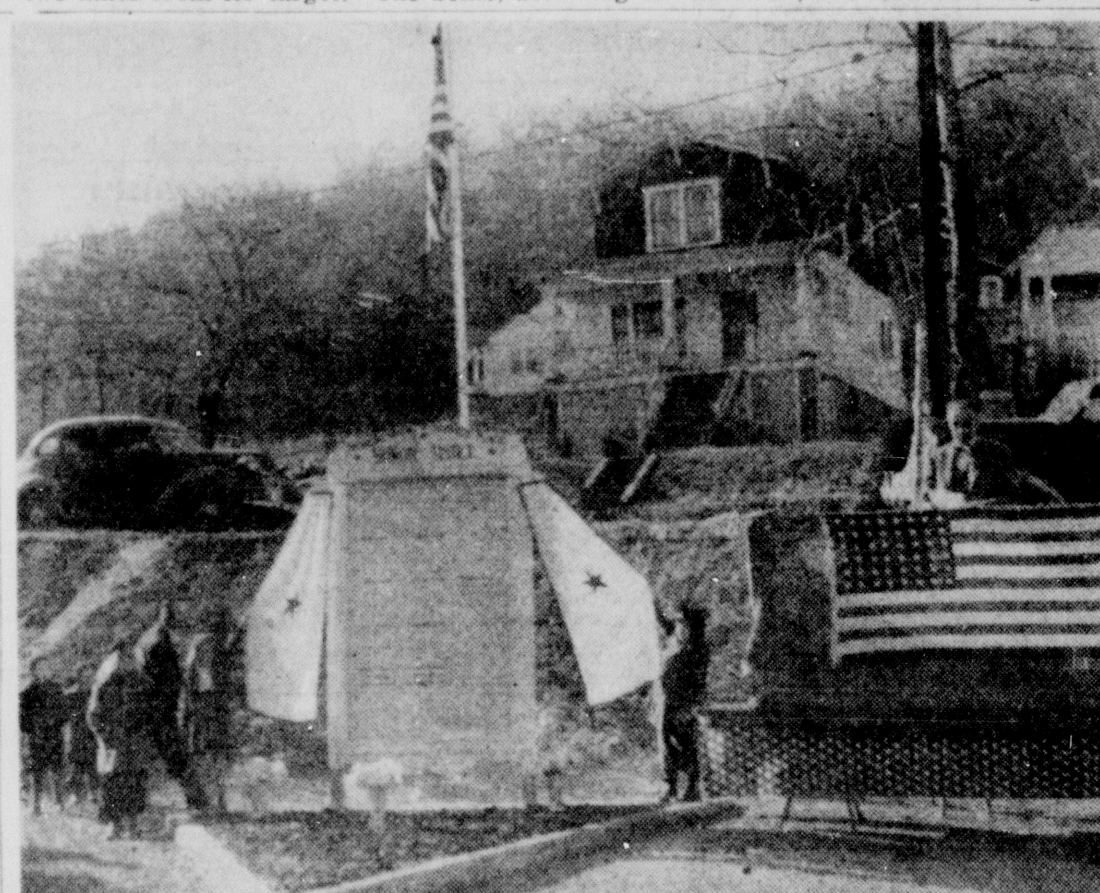

P. D. Collins, program director for the Rotary club announces that Miss Betty Weekland will be the guest speaker at the meeting to be held at noon in the Y. M. C. A. Miss Weekland who is in the midst of a series of services in the First Baptist church is not only a preacher of note but has also received wide recognition as a service club speaker.

This morning the young preacher is scheduled to address the students and faculty of Allegany high school.

In her service this evening in the First Baptist Church Miss Weekland will speak on "A-tisket, a-tasket." She has also announced that in answer to many requests she will answer the question, "Is It Scriptural for Women to Preach?" The service will begin promptly at 7:45.

PLENTY OF POTENTIAL DAMAGE—Dr. Robert W. Work (left), commander of the Cumberland control center, and Lieut. Col. M. H. Resni Coff, Ordnance department, Third Service Command, examine American and enemy bombs and shells being used in connection with a two-day bomb reconnaissance school being held in city hall auditorium here. Col. Resni Coff is instructor of the course. The large white bomb at the left is a general purpose bomb. Other shells in the display (left to right) are a ninety millimeter anti-aircraft shell, two three-inch anti-aircraft shells, forty millimeter and anti-aircraft shell, thirty-seven and twenty millimeter anti-aircraft shells, three bomb nose fuses and a seventy-five millimeter shell. In front of the larger shells are fifty and twenty caliber machine gun ammunition. The black object at the right rear of the table is an aerial bomb tail fin assembly. Beside it are bomb fragments, one of which Col. Resni Coff is holding. Hidden behind other shells in the picture are two three-inch German kilo electron incendiary bombs. The chart in the rear of the display shows an airplane traveling at a speed of 250 miles per hour at an elevation of 20,000 feet releasing a bomb two miles from its target. The bomb, according to the chart, will strike its target in forty-seven seconds.

HONOR MEN IN SERVICE—An honor roll dedication and flag raising ceremony were held Sunday afternoon in Bowling Green honoring men in service who formerly resided in the Bowling Green and Roberts place vicinity. The photograph above was snapped as Jerry Warren (left) young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Warren, and Jo Ann Davis, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Davis, Bowling Green, draw back curtains unveiling the honor roll bearing the names of twenty-one men. The American flag in back was raised by Harry Jones, oldest resident of Bowling Green. On the speaker's stand (right) is Marl Hyde, Bowling Green, who was master of ceremonies. A "V" for Victory plot is in front of the honor roll.

James A. Young Is Given Place On Liquor Board

Former Local Man Becomes Member of Liquor Appeals Board Group

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 16 (P)—James A. Young, chief clerk of the court of appeals for twenty years, was appointed today to the Liquor Appeals Board of Maryland's Bureau of State Licenses.

State Comptroller J. Millard Taves named Young to succeed W. Clinton McSherry, Frederick attorney, who resigned recently. Young's two-decade tenure as chief appeals court clerk ended Nov. 3 when Maurice Ogile, former court secretary, appointed last month by the high bench, took office.

Taves reported that Young's appointment had been sanctioned by Governor O'Connor. Young will serve with Chairman Frank P. Bratten, chief state license inspector and W. Franklin Purnell, of Ocean City, an associate member.

The comptroller explained that although Mr. Young was not an attorney, he had been appointed because of his wide acquaintanceship throughout Maryland; his knowledge of state conditions, and his "mature" judgment.

"The fact that Mr. McSherry was a lawyer naturally has led to the suggestion x x x that his successor also should be a member of the bar so that the bureau would have the benefit of such a member's legal advice," Taves said.

"However," he added, "the attorney general has advised me that under the existing statutes, his office is the proper legal advisor of the bureau x x x and hence it would seem unnecessary to appoint a lawyer to the present vacancy."

Young was elected appellate court chief clerk for the fifth time when he ran with O'Connor Taves and Attorney General William Walsh on the 1938 Democratic ticket.

MANY RESIDENTS APPEAR TO BE GAS CONSCIOUS OFFICIALS SAY

Trouble-Shooters Search for Source of Fumes in Old Sewer

Downtown Cumberland had a gas scare yesterday.

Ever since the disastrous explosion thirteen months ago on North Centre street, residents of the downtown area seem to have become extremely gas conscious, city officials say, because every time anyone smells gas or anything that smells like gas, they report it. And rightly so.

Yesterday, city hall was besieged by telephone calls from the area beginning about Market street southward to South Liberty street, from residents and business people complaining that gas fumes were escaping into their homes or business places. The local gas company also received some calls.

Trouble-shooters from the city and the gas company spent much of the day touring the "stricken" area, in an attempt to find the trouble and remedy it.

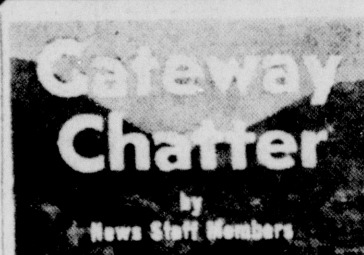

Investigation and a process of elimination finally traced the fumes to the old Mill race sewer line, which bisects that area of the city.

The fumes seemed to be more prevalent there, and were identified as gasoline fumes and not natural gas fumes. Workmen and officials expressed the opinion that gasoline has either been dumped in the sewer, or is escaping from some underground tank or other source into the sewer.

One trouble-shooter expressed the view that it is not pocketed in any particular place in sufficient quantity to be dangerous, and very probably will disappear entirely in a few days. He said the fumes back up sewers into buildings, since they are lighter than air, and have been known to seep through masonry walls.

The situation is still being investigated and will be remedied if the gasoline leak can be located. Gasoline will not win victory and

The Girl Scouts, locally and nationally, are deep in a unique money drive—the Girl Scout Victory Fund to help alleviate war-engendered distress among children of the world.

The drive is unique in that it is purely a Girl Scout affair—no outside contributions.

"America" is the subject of an article written by Father Boniface, pastor of the Sacred Heart church in Charleston, W. Va., which appeared in the Charleston Daily Mail recently. A picture of the former Cumberland pastor accompanied the article.

Part of the article Chatter feels will be of interest here, not only to the many friends of Father Boniface but of all readers of Chatter, and it is here given.

"At Valley Forge, the liberty, the independence, the very existence of our America was in the balance," Father Boniface writes. "Washington went down on his knees, and with him knelt America in the making."

"And from his knees bent in prayer he rose and marched to victory, and gave birth to the land of peace, justice, charity and freedom."

"Today America is facing its greatest crisis. But, friends, arms alone will not win victory and

SURPLUS TIRES MUST BE TURNED IN BY SUNDAY

About 3,000 tires have been turned in here by persons owning more than the allowed five per car, the Railway Express agency reports.

After Sunday it will be illegal to use gasoline obtained through a ration coupon for a car for which there are more than five tires.

According to the express agency the number of persons turning in their surplus tires has been increasing each day.

When the tire is given to the express agency the owner is given a receipt which will be redeemed for cash after the value of the tire is fixed by the federal government.

Milk By-products Are Curtailed Due to Shortage

Supply Is Reduced 800 Gallons Daily; Market Loses 10 Producers

A milk shortage of approximately 800 gallons a day in Cumberland has resulted in a number of processing plants curtailing the sale of their by-products such as cottage cheese, butter, milk and chocolate milk drinks. It was announced yesterday by the Cumberland Health Department.

Market Raids Charged
Five reasons are given for the shortage, namely, price, help, farmers selling herds, OPA price ceiling and one section of the state raiding the other sections with higher prices to producers.

The health department pointed out that the shortage of milk now over the entire state of Maryland is between 75,000 and 80,000 gallons daily with an actual shortage in Baltimore of 40,000 gallons a day. The situation has reached a point where it is almost impossible to obtain any western cream or milk for the East.

According to reports received here, the milk shortage in Washington, D. C., is between 30,000 and 35,000 gallons daily and the capital city market is now pulling on Maryland supplies.

The Maryland Milk Producers Association and also the Philadelphia market has entered the local picture, offering between $3.50 and $4.50 for 100 pounds, resulting in the loss of a number of local producers for more attractive prices elsewhere.

Producers Leave Shed
A check-up shows that the Cumberland milk shed now comprises 218 producers after a loss of ten in the past two weeks. The local milk shed covers the territory within a radius of fifty-five miles of this city and there are eight processors in the shed.

Milk consumption in Cumberland was 6,600 gallons a day at its peak but the shortage had reduced this figure to approximately 5,800 gallons yesterday.

As a result of the shortage in the supply, the health department and processors will be required to move farther west for a new supply and the situation may become more serious.

City Officials Air Complaints Of New Equipment

Council Airs Charges That Sewer Cleaning Machine Doesn't Work

City officials discussed the value of newly purchased sewer cleaning equipment, at some length yesterday at their regular weekly session.

Some city employees are reported to have complained that the equipment is not satisfactory and does not do the job intended for it to do. Mayor Thomas P. Conlon brought up the question when he said he thought it was time to stop "whisperings" around the city hall and suggested that a check of the equipment be made to determine if it is or is not satisfactory.

Finance Commissioner William E. McDonald expressed the view that "it seems worthless."

City Solicitor Charles Z. Heskett suggested that the reason for reported failures is that "there may be some people working for the city who don't want to use the equipment."

City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer said the equipment was demonstrated to him and several city employees over a two-day period before it was purchased. He told council that complaints probably arose when efforts were made to use the equipment for work for which it is not intended.

Rizer said it will probably be possible to get the factory representative back here to give another demonstration and to give further instructions about its proper use and purpose. Rizer said that the demonstration previously given proved beyond question that the equipment is satisfactory and if operated properly will do the job for which it was purchased.

So far, the city has not paid for the machinery but is due to make the first payment of $769.95 this month. The balance of the $2,199.85 total cost, is to be paid after April 1.

Extra Automobile Tires Must Be Sold by Saturday

Persons Who Fail To Sell Them Are Violating OPA Order, Thompson Says

Any automobile owner who has not sold his tires in excess of four in use and one spare by Saturday and has not returned his tire record and application for basic mileage ration book "A" or "D" by Dec. 12, is violating an order of the Office of Price Administration if he uses any form of gasoline ration book, Miles G. Thompson, office manager of War Price and Rationing Board No. 1-1, said yesterday.

Thompson emphasized that the OPA has authorized the rationing board to call in all ration books if tires in excess of the five mounted on the car are not sold to the government by Saturday and if the tire record and application for basic mileage ration book "A" or "D" is not in the hands of the rationing board by Dec. 12.

Thompson urged car owners to use particular care in filling out their tire record and application blanks and said that accuracy will determine the rapidity with which part of the forms are returned to the applicants.

Must Mail Entire Form

The entire form is to be mailed to the local rationing board Thompson explained, but only the part of it is to be filled in. On the front of the form, the applicant will fill in only two blocks, both on the upper part. One block asks for the name of the registered owner, his rural route or street number, city or post office and state.

The second block to be filled in on the front of the form asks for the vehicle license number, state of registration, year model, make and body type.

On the back of the form and at the top of the page, the car owner will list the serial numbers of the four tires mounted on the vehicle described in the application and the spare tire, five tires in all.

Beside the space provided for the serial numbers is another space asking the car owner to "state number of tires () and list their serial numbers." In the blank space provided between the parenthesis marks, the car owner should insert the number of tires in addition to the five permitted on his car. If he has no additional tires the word "none" should be written in the blank, Thompson said, but if he does possess them he must also list their serial numbers in the spaces provided.

Boxed in Heavy Border

In the lower half of the back side of the form, the part to be filled in by the car owner is boxed in a heavy border. The information to be printed there is a repetition of the information to be printed there is a repetition of the information given on the front of the form and in the space provided at the top of the side of the form or the serial numbers of the five tires mounted on the car.

Thompson explained that the car owner is permitted to have only one tire for which he does not list the serial number and that must have been obliterated if the exception is to be made. If the serial number cannot be read, the make of the tire should be inserted in the space provided for the serial number.

If the car owner cannot read the serial number on more than one tire, the tires concerned must be taken to a tire inspection station where proper persons must certify that the serial numbers have been obliterated, Thompson said.

Sherman Leases Coal Rights to Bluebaugh Seam

Obtains Ten-year Agreement To Mine Vein on Fixed Royalty Basis

A ten-year lease for a tract of coal land in this county was filed in the clerk's office, Allegany county court house yesterday.

Drawn between The Cumberland Company, of which Thomas B. Butler is president, and William L. Sherman and his wife, Camille J. Sherman, of this city, the lease gives Sherman the right to mine all the coal constituting the vein or seam known as the "Bluebaugh Seam," underlying the property of the roadway leading from Barreilville, Md., to Wellersburg, Pa., between the Mt. Savage road and the old Bond mine.

The lease covering rights to mine the coal for ten years is dated October 20, 1942, and expires October 20, 1952. Sherman agrees to pay fifteen cents royalty per ton to The Cumberland Company, with a minimum guarantee of $300 per twelve-month period.

Army Officer Says Cumberland Is Enemy Target

Lieut. Col. Resni Coff Addresses Bomb Reconnaissance Agents

"Because Cumberland is the center of a vast industrial region which is producing important material and supplies for the armed forces, it is a vital target for the enemy," Lieut. Col. M. H. Resni Coff, Ordnance department, Third Service Command, told approximately 150 bomb reconnaissance agents yesterday as the first course of a two-day instruction program in bomb reconnaissance in this city opened in city hall auditorium.

"This community is extremely vulnerable to attacks from the air," the colonel said. "The main line tracks of the three railroads, the sprawling factories along the junction of the Potomac river and Wills creek and the network of historical highways offer unmistakable guides to enemy bombers." Col. Resni Coff pointed out.

Workers Are Fighters

Industrial cities such as Cumberland provide our armed forces with the means of waging warfare, the speaker said, inasmuch as modern war cannot be waged without tanks, guns or ammunition, all of which require steel, coal and explosives. Under conditions of modern war, he continued, the workers in factories, mills, mines, shops or railroads have become fighters just as much as the soldiers on the firing line.

"The man or woman who assembles the shell is helping in our war effort as much as the soldier who puts the finished shell in the gun. In the same way," Col. Resni Coff continued, "the man who fabricates high grade steel or textiles is looked upon as a fighter."

"Cumberland, therefore, is an important industrial link in the production of war supplies for the cause of democracy, the colonel explained. "As such," he added, "this city is the enemy of the Axis and becomes a potential target area."

The course of instruction conducted by Col. Resni Coff will end this afternoon following a review and quiz. All students who qualify will be designated as bomb reconnaissance agents and will be assigned specific areas by Vincent P. Ingram, director of civilian defense for Allegany county.

To Show Film

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding general of the Third Service Command, has announced that an exclusive showing of the authentic British film, "Bomb Disposal and How the Problem Is Handled in England," will be shown at 2 o'clock this afternoon to business, professional and industrial leaders of this community.

Yesterday's lectures covered effects of aerial bombing, characteristics of enemy bombs, theory of explosives and methods of reporting unexploded and delayed action bombs during and after an aerial attack.

Col. Resni Coff will speak at noon today at the regular luncheon meeting of the Rotary club in Central Y.M.C.A.

Lions To Hear Dunkle; Ladies' Night Dinner Nets Red Cross $50.50

Prof. John L. Dunkle, president of Frostburg State Teachers College, will be the principal speaker at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Cumberland Lions Club tomorrow at 12:15 p. m., at the Central Y.M.C.A.

A ladies' night dinner, sponsored last week by the Lions, netted $50.50 for the benefit of Allegany county chapter of the American Red Cross.
